WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—(U.P.)—Secretary of Agriculture Hyde today increased the number of counties certified for emergency freight rate drought relief to 1,024, approximately one-third of all the counties in the United States.

Counties in 20 states now have been listed among those requiring freight rate relief.

The addition today included 317 counties in 19 states, including Montana.

DOCTORS FIGHT DISEASE AMONG STORM VICTIMS

More Than 1200 Confined to Santo Domingo Hospital, Reports Show

SANTO DOMINGO, Sept. 9.—(U.P.)—American and native surgeons worked tirelessly against great odds today to stop the disease epidemics sweeping Santo Domingo in the hurricane's wake.

Although engineers have restored running water and improved sanitary conditions, pestilence still threatens many thousands of the ruined city's inhabitants.

Dr. Antonio Silva, director of the Red Cross relief forces, said today that hospitals contained 1229 patients suffering from gangrene, lockjaw and severe injuries suffered in the hurricane of last Wednesday.

Virtually all of those injured have become infected by disease, according to the Epidemiologist Garrido. He estimated that 25 to 50 per cent of the patients would die.

FIGHT EPIDEMICS

Major Johnson of the U. S. Medical Corps, who has been working with the medical men sent by nearby islands, has been designated head of the campaign to fight the epidemics.

President Rafael J. Trujillo, meanwhile, dispatched through the United Press a message of gratitude expressing the thankfulness of the people of Santo Domingo to the outside world for the relief measures taken in their behalf.

President Trujillo said the people had been "deeply wounded" by the disaster, which killed more than 3,000 persons but declared they "reacted quickly in the face of such terrible happenings with the determination needed in such cases."

"I send this message through the United Press, voicing my gratitude expressed in the name of the Dominican people, grief-stricken but strong in the hope of a quick, vigorous recovery," the president's message said.

Sends Message

"We are greatly obliged to the friendly nations who have given us kind words and really comforting material help in our time of distress."

"We are also obliged to their noble representatives who are co-operating in relief work with us; and to the press, which gave to the world the news of our grief with surprising rapidity, moving the world to sympathy."

COUNTY-WIDE SEARCH MADE FOR MEXICAN LEPER WHEN HE ESCAPES FROM HOSPITAL

COUNTY-WIDE SEARCH for Angel Ynoja, 28, a Mexican leper, was started early today by the sheriff's office after the diseased man made a sensational escape from the Orange county hospital at 3 o'clock this morning.

Locked up in a quarantined section of the hospital, Ynoja escaped by crawling through a window, after preparing a dummy body, made of bed clothes in his bunk, to make guards and nurses believe that he was in his bed, it was reported.

Although the doors of the building were locked, Ynoja was given some freedom, due to the fact that since he had been in the hospital, almost three months, he had been a model prisoner, it was reported.

Ynoja resided at 917 East Pine street, Santa Ana, prior to the time he was taken to the hospital. County hospital authorities said today that the man's escape could not be laid to the hospital, due to the fact that he was under state supervision as a leper and that any allowances made him were not made by the hospital.

The leper had been gone for approximately three hours before a nurse noticed that he was not in his bed, it was reported. A checkup of the ward is made regularly and hospital attendants were sure that he could not be gone longer than that time before discovery was made.

Every effort was being made to arrest the man by deputy sheriffs this afternoon, according to Sheriff Sam Jernigan.

FRESH RIOT BREAKS OUT ON MONDAY

All Code Messages Prohibited By New Officials In Buenos Aires Today

IRIGORYEN IS SOUGHT

Government Orders Arrest Of Former President And All Other Leaders

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(U.P.)—The all-America Cable company announced that censorship was established in Buenos Aires at 1:44 p. m. today. All code messages were prohibited.

The censorship at Buenos Aires previously had been lifted last Saturday when the revolution overthrew the government of Hipolito Irigoyen.

Fighting in the Argentine capital last night, due to an erroneous report that a counter-revolution had broken out, caused the new government to take precautions today against further disorders. The city of Buenos Aires was quiet at noon, shortly after a United Press correspondent had made a complete tour of the capital which he reported returning to normal although the concentrations of troops under the new provisional government were maintained.

The government issued orders today for stern action to prevent recurrence of street fighting that broke out last night immediately after the inauguration of the revolutionary government headed by General Jose E. Uriburu.

The celebration of ceremonies installing the new government was turned into a "reign of terror" by the well timed plot of a small group apparently in sympathy with the deposed President Hipolito Irigoyen and by confusion that caused forces supporting the new administration to believe erroneously for a few hours that a counter revolution had been started.

The mistake, charged by the government to the Irigoyenist plotters, was discovered only after severe street fighting and bloodshed had marked inauguration of the Uriburu administration.

The government ordered the arrest of former President Irigoyen and other leaders of the fallen regime, including the former Vice President Enrique Martinez and all ministers of the Irigoyen cabinet. They were blamed for plotting to spread terror.

CHINESE KILL FIVE RADICAL TEACHERS

HANKOW, China, Sept. 9.—(U.P.)—The feeling against Communism reached a fever pitch here today when five radicals were seized on the streets and beheaded.

The anti-Communist drive, which had been dormant for some time, was resumed simultaneously with a fresh outbreak of Communist propaganda. The five were preaching in the open streets when taken by a large group of men to the pavement outside the Foreign Race club and beheaded.

Three radical teachers, also extolling the crowds on street corners, were more fortunate, merely being arrested and thrown into jail.

Double Burglary At Dana Point Puzzles Deputies

'GHOST THIEF' ADDS MYSTERY TO NIGHT RAID

With one asserted self-confessed burglar in jail, caught red handed in the summer home of A. H. Neale, of 1335 Pothill boulevard, Pasadena, at Dana Point, late last night, deputy sheriffs, who made the arrest today are confronted with the fact that the house was actually entered and robbed by another thief, prior to the time the arrested man was caught in the house. The first thief has not been found.

At 6:40 o'clock last night, the sheriff's office was notified that the house had been entered. This call came from the caretaker of the place. Deputy Sheriffs Carter and Thornhill went to Dana Point and made an investigation. No burglar was found. They then returned to Santa Ana. At 9:30 o'clock last night, another call was received by the sheriff's office, this time from Mrs. Neale, to the effect that a burglar had been captured in the home.

Deputy Sheriffs French and Steward answered this call, and found a man cornered by Neale and a private detective, whom the Neales had brought from Pasadena with them when they heard about the first burglary.

The prisoner gave his name as Renwick W. McCammon, 43, carpenter, of Huntington Beach. According to Undersecretary French, the man is alleged to have confessed that he entered the house for the purpose of stealing when he was caught. He said that he was out of work and that he "thought he would roll up a few things and take them with him." He had rolled up several rugs and a toilet set when he was surprised by members of the Neale family and the private detective.

Deputy sheriffs were certain, they said, that McCammon could not have been the first man to enter the house, as a check of his whereabouts revealed that he was at Newport Beach at the time the first burglary was discovered. They think it highly improbable that he was there and then left only to return again, as nothing has been found stolen in the first burglary.

Following the discovery of the first burglary, the caretaker at the place notified Mr. and Mrs. Neale in Pasadena, who immediately left for Dana Point, taking with them the private detective.

They had just entered the place when they heard a noise, and making a search, found McCammon hiding in a closet, they reported.

McCammon was brought to the county jail, where he was booked on a charge of burglary.

DEATH COMES TO DRUGGIST ON BIRTHDAY

The date of his birth was the date of his death for James T. Tidball, well known Santa Ana druggist, who passed away at his home at 1321 West Fourth street last night, on his 72nd birthday, after an illness of more than a year.

Mr. Tidball was a native of Waterville, Minn., and was born there on Sept. 9, 1858.

A resident of Santa Ana since 1910, when he came here from his home in Brookings, S. D., he had been a druggist at the Wingwood pharmacy on East Fourth street for the past 19 years. He was a pioneer of the state of South Dakota and was the first man to operate a drug store in Brookings county, in that state.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Emma L. Tidball, and four sons, Charles T., of Geneva, Switzerland; Austin Clyde, of Brookings, and William R. and David Glenn Tidball, of Santa Ana.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Harrell and Brown Funeral parlors here, at 116 West Seventh street. Interment will be made in Fairhaven cemetery. The Rev. O. Scott McFarland, pastor of the First Presbyterian church here, will officiate at the services.

been negotiating for its return to Germany.

After Dino Grandi, Italian foreign minister, had reported on the transport situation in the Saar, Dr. Curtius arose and asked the council to consider, through the Saar commissioner, the complete withdrawal of French soldiers at present guarding the railways.

Brundage replied France had no intention of continuing the occupation of any region outside its own territory and that already the Saar troops had been reduced from 550 to 250, which were necessary to guarantee unrestricted movement of trains.

Brundage's statement was accepted by Dr. Curtius and the council, providing that the representatives of Germany and France discuss the question of troops in the Saar basin with the high commissioner.

The report of Grandi also was accepted.

Dr. Curtius considered the question of troops of the utmost importance to the German government because of the forthcoming Reichstag elections. The problem will be discussed at an early meeting of the council. It was considered certain, however, that France would maintain a small force in the Saar until the status of the rich coal basin has been established definitely under French or German protection.

It was considered notable that the report of the mandates commission reviewing the African and near eastern mandates elicited France on establishing a constitutional regime in Syria by "endeavoring to reconcile the requirements of the mandate with the present Syrian aspirations." The reference was a contrast to the critical survey of British rule in Palestine.

Cuba obstructed the amendments to the statutes of the permanent court for international justice by being the only country refusing to ratify the protocol which provides for permanent sittings to permit the court to conduct more business and also increases the judges from 11 to 15. The ratification must be unopposed and it was believed the court would not be changed to a permanent sitting. The assembly may increase the number of judges however.

TO OPEN BIDS ON WILLARD PROPERTY

Bids are scheduled to open tonight at the regular monthly meeting of the Santa Ana board of education on sale of the old Frances Willard site located on North Main street, and on two residences located on Russell street adjacent to the Julia Lathrop Junior High school. Several bids have been received, according to Miss Elizabeth Phillips, secretary of the board.

Two committees, one representing various civic organizations and the other from the city council, are scheduled to appear before the school board. A request will be made that all bids on the Willard site be rejected so that an opportunity may be given the city to make arrangements for the purchase of the property for city use and development.

One member of the school board, when interviewed on the matter today, stated that the board needed the money to finance projects that it had started and did not see how it would be possible to turn down an offer for the immediate purchase of the property if one were received, in the face of the indefinite proposal which had been suggested by the citizens' meeting.

County Survey On Education To Be Discussed Today

The question of a county wide educational survey is to be discussed tonight before the Santa Ana and Fullerton boards of education and members of the county board of supervisors, by Dr. F. W. Hart, of the University of California. It was learned today. The discussion will take place at the meeting of the Santa Ana board, at 8 p. m.

The Fullerton and Santa Ana boards of education and the educational committee of the Associated Chambers of Commerce recently joined in a petition presented to the board of supervisors asking that they finance a county wide educational survey.

LA HABRA, Sept. 9.—The packing and shipping season for lemons is practically over. The La Habra Citrus association is operating with a small crew.

The entire packing force consisted of 30 packers in the lemon house during the summer but this number has now been cut to one-half. The packers started back to work today after several days off and will probably continue to work intermittently until the close of the season.

EIGHT STATES HOLD PRIMARY BALLOT TODAY

The G. O. P. elected a United States senator by an almost 2 to 1 majority, reelected a governor by a margin only slightly smaller, was victorious in all four congressional contests, and easily captured a majority of seats in the state legislature.

Democrats made material inroads and the Republican margin was only a fraction of the approximately 82,000 votes of two years ago. But the minority party's plea for a vote which would reflect Maine's attitude as holding the Hoover administration responsible for current business depression failed to produce winning support.

Congressman Wallace H. White Jr., of Lewiston, Republican, was elected to the United States senate after 11 years service in the lower house of congress, defeating Frank H. Haskell, Portland attorney and Democrat, by a decisive majority.

William Tudor Gardiner, Maine's Republican governor, was reelected over Edward C. Morgan Jr., of Rockland, Democrat, running only a few thousand votes behind White.

With only 54 of the state's 632 election precincts missing, the vote stood:

For Senator—White (R) 77,860; Haskell (D) 49,468.

For Governor—Gardiner (R) 74,363; Moran (D) 57,979.

Congressional contests resulted as follows:

Carroll L. Beedy, Republican, was re-elected over Thomas L. Locke, Democrat; Donald S. Partidge, dry republican, was elected to the seat vacated by Senator Elect White, defeating Albert Belevue, wet Democrat; John E. Nelson, Republican was reelected over Leo D. Lamond, Democrat; Donald F. Snow, Republican, defeated Clinton C. Stevens, Democrat.

FINAL RESULTS ANNOUNCED BY COUNTY CLERK

A total of 29,225 votes were cast at the recent primary election, it has been announced by County Clerk J. M. Backs, following the tallying of the official canvass of the vote which has just been completed. The results were forwarded to the secretary of state.

This figures out just a fraction less than 60 per cent of the registered vote and is regarded as a very good percentage. It had been predicted by county officials and seasoned politicians prior to the election that the vote would run around 40 per cent of the registered vote. There were 48,987 registered voters at the time of the primary.

In announcing the final results Backs included the figures on the votes cast for Congressman Phil D. Swing and Assemblyman Edward Craig, which had not been reported previously. Swing polled a vote of 17,566 and Craig received 15,352 votes. Both of these candidates were unopposed.

The vote for the state board of equalization representative was as follows: H. G. Cottell, 5045; Alfred J. Barnes, 4754; Edwin Baker, 2420; Jesse G. Slater, 2027; Jasper Barry, 1680.

The total votes included ballots from four absent voters, Backs stated.

The large proportion of the vote cast was attributed to the intense interest aroused in the various contests in the county and in the hot campaign that had been conducted in connection with the nomination for governor.

It will be remembered that the Register predicted possibility of a 50 per cent vote on election day.

URGE GROWERS TO SHOW RARE FRUITS

The exhibit of subtropical fruits at the Orange county fair, under the auspices of the agricultural extension service of the University of California, will be in charge of Charles Knowlton, of Fullerton, this year in the absence of County Farm Advisor H. E. Wahlberg, it was learned today.

The many rare fruits on display in this booth in the past have won for the exhibit a position of prominence and great interest. An appeal is being made to growers throughout the county to keep the exhibit of subtropical horticulture in mind and to arrange for the display of their products. Arrangements are being made with the farm advisor's office to transport the fruit if necessary and to provide cold storage to keep the exhibits in good condition until the fair opens if there is danger of it deteriorating before that time.

LOSES $80 IN GYPSY FORTUNE TELLING GAME

An old gypsy game, played scores of times in Santa Ana during the past several years, parted Mrs. Mabel Gilcrest, of 108 1-2 East Twentieth street, from $80 of her money here last Saturday, according to a report filed with the city police yesterday afternoon.

Last Saturday a gypsy woman came to her house and inveigled her into allowing her fortune to be told. Immediately consent was given, the gypsy told Mrs. Gilcrest that the "curse of her life" was money, and then she went about the duties of relieving the woman of her "curse," by taking her money, it was reported.

The fortune teller took the $80 presented her, which represented the "curse," and supposedly wrapped it in a cloth and put it under the pillow of the bed. Here Mrs. Gilcrest was told to leave it for three days. Then, she was told, she could have back the money and the curse would be gone.

Mrs. Gilcrest waited. Yesterday, the three day time limit expired. She took out the package, opened it and found that it contained only paper. The $80 was gone. Mrs. Gilcrest then notified the police.

Police were immediately put on the trail of the gypsy woman, missing then for three days, and when one was seen in company with two gypsy men in a car at Fourth and Main streets yesterday afternoon, a traffic officer immediately gave chase, but by the time he commanded a machine and started in pursuit, the gypsy car had disappeared and no trace of it has ever been found.

STUDENT BOARD PREPARING FOR COLLEGE YEAR

With one vacancy resulting from the resignation of Frank Miles, commissioner of forensics, the Santa Ana Junior college executive board was preparing today to start work for the coming semester.

Miles, appointed last June by Abbott Mason, student president, was forced to drop the position because of other duties. His successor will be named in a few days by Mason after which the board will hold its first meeting. Extensive plans already have been formulated by the group.

Abbott Mason, associated student president, is one of the most active students on the campus. Last semester, he was president of the O. CITY TRUSTEES VOICE FEAR OF 'PATERNALISM'

Doubt as to the advisability of passing ordinances having a tendency to regulate the activities of private citizens was voiced by several councilmen last night at the regular council meeting when the enactment of two proposed measures came up for discussion. One related to the keeping of animals, including fowls and chickens, on premises located within the city, while the other proposed opening and closing hours for barber shops.

Over the negative votes of Mayor Frank L. Purinton and Councilman Stanley E. Goode, the council adopted an ordinance extending the distance from dwellings in which small animals and fowls may be kept. The distance for keeping chickens on a private lot was extended from 25 to 50 feet from a dwelling. The distance for keeping animals like sheep, goats, cows, and horses, was extended from 50 to 75 feet.

In voting against the measure, Mayor Frank Purinton and Councilman Goode took the stand that legislation of this sort smacks of paternalism and tends to dictate to private citizens how they should use their property and run their affairs. Goode took occasion to remark that already there is too much of this sort of legislation.

On the grounds that an ordinance regulating the opening and closing hours of barber shops in the city not only would be unconstitutional but take away the right of citizens to run their own business to suit their own convenience, the council declined to entertain a proposal of the Santa Ana Journeymen Barbers union asking for such an ordinance.

The proponents of the measure were represented by Attorney D. G. Wetlin, who explained that the proposal had the endorsement of the greatest number of shops in the city. He further STATED THAT THE BARBERS' UNION IS WILLING TO FILE A BOND TO COVER ANY EXPENSES THAT MAY BE INCURRED INCIDENTALLY TO TAKING THE PROPOSED ORDINANCE INTO THE COURTS TO TEST ITS CONSTITUTIONALITY.

James Kelly, representing the independent barbers, appeared before the council and urged the defeat of the proposal. He said that the proposed ordinance was the work of the union barbers, who were attempting to freeze out the independent shops. He further stated that some of the small shops were entirely dependent upon early morning and night trade.

Oil Company Asks Permit For H. B. Gasoline Plant

BOARD SLATED TO TAKE ACTION SEPTEMBER 15

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Sept. 9.—The Superior Oil company asked the city council at the adjourned meeting of that body Monday night for a permit to erect a gasoline plant and compressor plant, with waste water cleaning plant and sumps, on the Reed tract, described as comprising 12 1/2 acres cornering at Atlanta and California on the east side.

At the suggestion of Councilman Elson G. Conrad, the granting of the permit was postponed until the next meeting of the council, an adjourned meeting to be held next Monday night at 7:30 o'clock at the city hall. Mayor Bowen announced that in the meantime the council would meet in committee and discuss the matter and if possible reach a decision.

Mayor Bowen announced that he personally strongly favored granting the permit, and urged on the members of the council that they comply with the request of the Superior Oil company.

L. A. Rogers, engineer; W. B. Wagner, attorney, and J. M. Hicks, gas engineer for the Superior Oil company, presented the request of their company for the permit and urged that favorable action be taken.

Attorney Wagner explained in answer to questions by the mayor and members of the council that the waste water line would be available, probably, for the use of other companies in the field. The Superior will own the line and other companies may be permitted to use it dependent on their paying their portion of the cost and upkeep, and subject to the supervision of the Superior against running mud through the line.

Mayor Bowen called on A. E. Adair, a home owner and business man, residing half a block from the refinery site, as to his objections to the plant. Adair said that he felt it would damage his property for residential purposes owing to noise and smell.

W. T. Hunter, another resident living four blocks away, said he had no objections to the proposed location of the refinery site.

In the course of the discussion, it was brought out that the Superior is to be granted permission by the city council to use the city sewer line outlet to the sea, from a point east of and below the septic tank. This outlet extends 700 feet out into the ocean. The oil company would use the sewer outlet, it was stated, during certain hours of the night when the peak load of the sewer was off.

Mayor Bowen asked all objectors to the permit if the gasoline plant would be more objectionable than an oil derrick. They replied that it would, particularly as the bringing in of an oil well gave them opportunity to get some profit out of their property ruined by oil drilling while the erection of a gasoline plant left them no outlet for protecting themselves against property damage.

Mayor Bowen urged that the spending of $175,000 in the city was an important matter and that the Superior Oil company should be given every support in its efforts to provide the city with such a plant. The mayor also urged the importance of a waste water disposal plant in the field. He said it was something the council had been striving for a long time to accomplish.

Under the ordinance to be voted on September 23 at the special election, there is a provision that compels oil companies to provide a satisfactory waste water disposal system. With a pipe line system in the field, the council under such an ordinance could possibly force the oil companies operating inside the city limits to tie into the Superior waste water line.

INCREASE FOR SCHOOLS SEEN IN FULLERTON

FULLERTON, Sept. 9.—With registration of students practically completed, instructors and students in the Fullerton schools were today prepared for the opening session of classes tomorrow. It was announced by the registrars of the local institutions.

Although no great increase in enrollments over last year is anticipated by school authorities, it is believed that registrations will show a small increase over last year on the basis of number of students enrolling to date, the junior college having a total enrollment of 430 up to last evening. While this figure for the junior college is still far below the total for last year, it is believed that by the end of the week, the enrollment will have reached the figure of last year.

Totals for the registration at the high school are not yet available as registrars have only the daily enrollments but the enrollment will undoubtedly reach the number of last year from present indications. The elementary schools of the city are expected to have a substantial increase over last year, when the attendance was well over 1800. Increase each year during the past four years has been approximately eight per cent, according to R. E. Green, superintendent of schools, who expects an increase for the coming year of slightly under eight per cent. He pointed out that while the increase during the past four years has averaged eight per cent, that figure has fluctuated from six to 12 per cent, making an accurate estimate for the increase impossible. Numerous improvements have been made in the elementary system this summer including the construction of a new garage for school busses. All elementary schools here will open Wednesday.

New instructors have been added to the faculty of both high school and junior college. Teachers meetings for all schools of the city for the purpose of instructing faculty members of the new changes in the curricula have been held within the past few days.

A reception for new members of the faculty has been held to introduce the new instructors and provide the opportunity of a reunion of members of the faculty.

Lowest fares east ever offered end September 30. Chicago only $47.50, choice of routes. For any trip see Southern Pacific agents, M. J. Logue, Phone 268, or S. W. Sala, Phone 278.

SUPERIOR OIL TAKES LEASES IN H. B. FIELD

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Sept. 9.—The Superior Oil company is undertaking extensive development in the Huntington Beach field and has outlined a program which includes a deep test in the west end town lot zone and the establishment of a gasoline plant, waste water disposal plant.

The deep test is now down 4800 feet on Twentieth street between Ocean and Walnut. The Superior is also installing a heavy rotary outfit on the drill site adjoining the McCasland deep test well at Twenty-first and Olive. While this project of the Superior has not been announced as a deep test, it is apparently a step toward offsetting the McCasland if that well, which is down about 5800, should be brought in a producer. The McCasland well is said to be cutting in shale with streaks of oil sand.

It is known the Superior has taken a number of leases in the west end town lot zone recently and is also negotiating for purchases and leases on other drill sites in that area. The latest deal of importance is a lease on lots 12, 14, 16 and 18 block 119. This is on Nineteenth street between Ocean and Walnut. The Associated Oil company quitclaimed the lots to the Pacific Electric and the Pacific Electric sold them to R. R. Morris and associates, who in turn made the lease to the Superior. It is regarded as one of the best leases in the west end town lot field.

The proposed curtailment of oil in the state bringing the daily production down 46,000 barrels, to make a total of 550,000 for the state, effects the Huntington Beach field. The production out here is being opposed by the small independent producers.

The Camp Oil company Newland No. 1 well has the pipe struck at around 5800 feet. The drill crew is not alarmed and expect to overcome the trouble shortly. They were making out a core when the pipe struck. Conditions at the well are reported as highly encouraging.

Award Contract For School Soon

SAN CLEMENTE, Sept. 9.—Den Acres, secretary of the school board, announces that all details have been completed for the opening of the school Wednesday. He says the teaching staff has been engaged and that the contract for the erection of a new room to the school will be let within a few days.

Mrs. Hortense Vernon will again be principal at San Clemente. Assisting her will be Mrs. Ray Barnett and a new teacher, Mrs. Caroline Thompson, of Colton. Mrs. Thompson takes the place of Mrs. Howard Harper, formerly Miss Elizabeth Scott, who has been transferred to the Serra school.

Balboa Pole Sitter May Go Up Again

NEWPORT-BALBOA, Sept. 9.—Bob Moreland, flagpole sitter who failed to break the world's pole-sitting record and came down Saturday after a continuous "sit" of six weeks and one day, may try again under the direction of Meiklejohn brothers. It was said today.

Moreland sat on a flagpole in Chicago for seven weeks and one day, setting a world mark which was later beaten when another flagpole expert sat for seven weeks and four days. Moreland tried to beat that mark here, but had to come down Saturday. He could not walk as he ached from the pole, his body being almost paralyzed from the long vigil, but he is said to be recovering rapidly.

MUFFLERS DUE FOR GASOLINE PLANT AT H. B.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Sept. 9.—The city council in session Monday night, by unanimous action following a motion by Councilman Elson Conrad, seconded by Councilman Chris King, authorized the city engineer, Merwin Rosson, to take whatever action was necessary to compel the Richardson Oil company to install mufflers that would reduce and do away with the noise created at its gasoline plant at Thirteenth and Palm, a block from the elementary school.

This plant has been operating for more than four years. It is located near a residential and school district.

Councilman Bayard Butcher made a report on the condition of the municipal water used in this city. Butcher reported on new analysis. Colon bacilli was present in one of the tests.

It was announced by the mayor that the percentage of B. bacilli or colon bacilli in the one test was not sufficient to condemn the supply. Of four tests made only one showed the B. bacilli. It had been taken from a hydrant near the Seventeenth street park. The other three tests showed plenty of objectionable matter in the water but no menacing germs, it was reported.

TEETOTALER CITIZEN
LINDAY, Calif., Sept. 9.—Judge Roy Simmons, resident here, is an ardent dry appears to be a fact beyond debate. Simmons awoke early one morning to find a bootlegger, fearing pursuit by law officers, had dumped 20 five-gallon cans full of extremely high quality alcohol in his back yard. Simmons immediately notified a constable here, who held the liquor for federal officers. On analysis the liquor was reported to be almost pure alcohol, valued at about $12 a gallon.

Pretentious Home Due On Newport Bay

NEWPORT-BALBOA, Sept. 9.—One of the first of a large number of palatial homes slated to be erected on Lido Isle will be built by S. M. Griffith, head of the Griffith company, which has the $1,170,000 paving and improvement contract on the new island property in Newport Bay.

Griffith recently returned from a trip to Europe and announced his intention to build a summer home on Lido Isle soon after he visited the scene of his company's work. This job created state-wide attention at the time it was let last winter, as it was the largest of its kind ever let in the state of California.

Work is proceeding satisfactory on all parts of the big job. The approaches to the bridge will be completed in less than two weeks, it was stated today, and by that time it will be possible to drive on paved roads from Newport boulevard to the bridge, over it and on other new paved roads to nearly every part of the island.

ALL DAY MEET HELD BY TWO CHURCH GROUPS

GREENVILLE, Sept. 9.—An all-day meeting was held Sunday at the Greenville Methodist church, south, the Sunday school and preaching services, which had been discontinued for some weeks due to the infantile paralysis epidemic, being held for the first time. The fourth quarterly meeting of the conference year was held in the afternoon.

Dinner was served in the league room at noon, each family bringing basket lunch and a delightful surprise was the serving of a turkey with dressing and gravy and all the "fixings" by the superintendent of the Sunday school, J. W. Shiffer, and his sister, Mrs. May Clayton. Members of both the Talbert and Greenville congregations were present.

Dr. Cecil B. Aker, presiding elder, was present from Los Angeles for the day, occupying the pulpit in the morning and conducting the afternoon conference. A special vocal number was presented at the morning service by the Rev. Edward Moody, of Garden Grove, who sang "My Mother's Prayer," acting as his own accompanist. Dr. Aker also gave an interesting account of the eastern visit.

A satisfactory report was given from both the Talbert and Greenville churches and it is expected that finances will be up in full by the annual conference date, October 15, the conference to be held in San Diego.

Officers for the year were elected for both churches. Sunday school superintendents were both re-elected. The report on the missionary society, which includes both churches, was given by the president, Mrs. Anna Helm. There are 14 members in the society and this was announced as being the only society in the conference with every member a church member. Required pledges have been sent in by the society. A box has gone to the Homer Toberman mission during the year. A total of $11 was given a needy cause besides the supplying of considerable clothing.

CHAMBER SEEKING NEW 'SLOW' SIGNS

GARDEN GROVE, Sept. 9.—H. E. Yockey, president of the Garden Grove Chamber of Commerce, presided at the regular monthly meeting held in the Legion hall Monday noon. Covers were placed for 26 members.

A communication was read from W. A. Bean, regarding the loss of his position as street cleaner, upon motion of H. A. Lake, the following committee was appointed to take up the matter with the business men. W. C. Frink, E. R. Schneider, E. L. Arrowsmith, W. A. Wheeler.

J. G. Allen requested names of parties having houses for rent to leave same with the secretary of the chamber of commerce, as more houses will be needed for school teachers.

William Viers Brady gave a short talk on the advisability of Garden Grove joining the Metropolitan Water district of Southern California, whereupon the following committee was appointed to look into the matter. W. V. Brady, W. B. Wentz and Irvine German.

W. V. Wentz suggested the need of a "slow" sign at the corner of Pine and Acacia. J. G. Allen stated the need of providing such signs at all intersections into Stanford near the school buildings.

The president agreed to take the matter up with the county supervisors or the Auto Club of Southern California.

REGISTRATION AT BEACH HIGH SCHOOL GAINS

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Sept. 9.—The high school and the elementary school in this city will open Wednesday morning. At the Huntington Beach high school last week, these were 525 students registered. The registration for the previous year was 523. That was the largest registration ever known at the school up to September, 1929. Up to date this is the largest registration in the history of the high school. This increase is really important as there is a new high school at Newport which draws students who otherwise would have come here.

At the elementary school the registration will run about the same as last year, approximately 900 students. Last year the exact registration for the first week was 885 students. This will probably be exceeded slightly this year, when the final reports of the various rooms are tabulated tomorrow.

There will be some increase in the enrollment at the high school before the close of the present week.

AUXILIARY TO LAUNCH JELLY DRIVE FRIDAY

With the next Friday and Saturday named for the annual jam and jelly drive of the American Legion Auxiliary, members of that organization today asked Santa Ana housewives to set aside some of the products of their busy canning season to donate to the auxiliary for the benefit of veterans in the tuberculosis hospital at San Fernando.

So many of the veterans require such delicacies to make their trays attractive and coax lagging appetites, and the local unit of the auxiliary is one that has never failed in remembering the needs of valor and the sacrifices of the veterans. Each year since the World war the Legion auxiliary has staged these jelly drives, collecting the home canned dainties for the disabled veterans. Response on the part of Santa Ana housewives always has been generous. To facilitate matters the auxiliary will furnish jars and glasses for those who wish them. They may be obtained through Mrs. Fannie Reeves, chairman of the committee.

Donations will be received on the specified date between the hours of 10 a. m. and 5 p. m., in the Legion hall. On Sunday, the fruit will be loaded on a truck furnished by the Legion and taken to the hospital. If the plan that has prevailed in previous years is followed, a delegation of Legion auxiliary members will accompany the gift and see to the distribution of the sweets.

The Public Forum

Communications under this heading must be signed by the name of the writer. These communications express the opinions of the writers of them. The opinions may or may not be the opinions of The Register.

It has been jokingly asked whether native Californians "boast" of their state "in earnest" or "from force of habit."

The question, or joke, whichever it be, is rather amusing, to say the least, judging from the very large population of the state—statistics showing are not all native-born. That, alone, should speak for itself, and the "joke" does not fit.

As a matter of fact, it is not the native Californian who does the boasting, if so one call it, but those who, coming here, found it so much greater than their expectations; there were no savage Indians to contend with, no rigorous climate to protect their lives from, no fear of starvation—unless they came like credulous children seeking a fortune at the "foot of the rainbow." These people, who found conditions so much to their liking are grateful to a good God who has provided real blessings in numerous parts of the world for His people. Many have achieved great results and, if they praise a little too strongly, may they not be pardoned for so doing?

The native sons and daughters did not spring up in the fields, as so many mushrooms or toadstools, but are the product and by-product of early pioneers—whether it be of the early discoverers of the covered wagon, and all coming of ancestries of various nations who, blending, have since striven to uphold the ideals, aims and traditions of these same pioneers. Is it not worth it?

We are grateful and not boastful for the many blessings that God has bestowed upon our land; not boastful that He has given to us enough of these blessings to enable us to share with the millions of immigrants and emigrants seeking health and better conditions in our state from less fortunate parts of the world; that we are enabled to share in part with many made destitute by disasters and drought such as exist at the present time throughout the states and other parts of the world.

We are grateful to the wonderful foresight of those hardy, courageous early pioneers who came here with the purpose of founding new homes, making their way amidst dangers, hardships and privations—unknown to any of us—finally establishing a new civilization in this California and were responsible for the native sons and daughters of tomorrow—did our critics ever stop to think of that?

We honor and revere the memory of those pioneers and try—amidst big odds—to keep alive the aims and ideals upon which they built this wonderful "western empire." If this be "boasting," it seems rather a commendable fault, is it not? And, truly, we are in earnest. This much for the first part of the question—are we in earnest?

Yearly, we observe the 9th day of September in commemoration of the day when the aims and purposes of the early settlers took form as the embryo of our state, on September 3, 1850, after having won a battle against slavery and imperialism, finding themselves a free people in a free state—stepping right into the union of states without having gone through a territorial form of government. We feel that we can justly compare our freedom with that of the 13 colonies and our rejoicing to that of all true Americans on the Fourth of July. We Californians call this fault—loyalty—and we are not alone. The papers announce Iowa, day, Ohio day, Nebraska day, etc., observed by residents of the respective states, in California, in loyalty to the state from which they sprung. This is patriotism. We admire those who can do honor to their native state but prove loyal to the country to which they owe their living. If they can be loyal to theirs, they will be better citizens in ours, and are the kind of citizens who have put their shoulders to the great wheel of endeavor and helped or are helping to build a bigger and better California. To those we give honor and respect. The more of that calibre we have, the less misunderstanding.

Those principles and ideals for which the true and loyal native Californian stands constitute the faults of which we are accused. Gratitude to our forefathers who laid the cornerstone of the foundations of our state; to those later builders who have so materially helped to carry on, becoming Californians at heart as well as in, and the fathers and mothers of present native sons and daughters. In doing homage and honoring these we are in earnest.

The perpetuation of these aims, ideals and traditions—year after year—has, perforce, become a habit—two very commendable faults that all true native-born of California possess. They stand for the state, not as north or south or east or west, but for one glorious whole California, as it was founded and as we love.

We hope this answers the question. Yes, we love, honor and revere the memory of our forefathers very much in earnest and in continuing to do so, it has become force of habit.

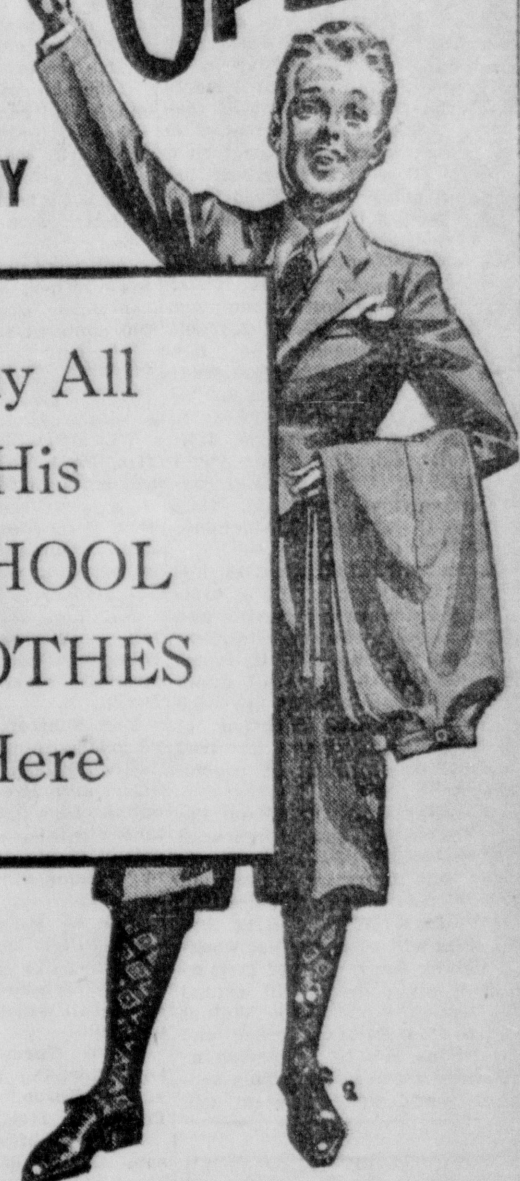

Respectfully submitted, MATILDA LEMON, Recording secretary, chairman of Americanization committee, Native Daughters of the Golden West.

Orange Council Lets Contract For Storm Drain

L.A. MAN GETS WORK ON BID OF $75,291.03

ORANGE, Sept. 9.—The contract for installing the storm drain here was let to John Artugovich, of Los Angeles, at an adjourned meeting of the city council late yesterday. Artugovich was one of 10 bidders and won the contract on a bid of $75,291.03. The highest bid submitted more than $29,000 higher than that of the successful bidder and was $104,672.53.

The other bids were, Goro-Rados company, of Los Angeles, $87,067.49; Butterfield Construction company, of San Diego, $92,135.46; Myracle Construction company, of Long Beach, $104,672.53; Torsion Construction company, of Long Beach, $104,672.53; R. E. Cooney, of Los Angeles, $85,764.03; Nick Chutuk, of Los Angeles, $84,974.50; Drainage Construction company, of Lynwood, $87,644.80; J. C. Hickey, of Alhambra, $101,552.31.

As submitted bids covered 15 separate items covering pipe of various sizes, catch basins, paving and culverts. The items were tabulated by City Engineer C. C. Bonebrake and W. G. Knox, of Santa Ana. The contract was awarded Artugovich by the adoption of resolution No. 427, which received the unanimous support of council members.

It is expected that work on the storm drain will be commenced about September 20 and it is thought that the entire project will be completed within a period of 60 or 70 days. It is thought that the system will be in perfect working order by the middle of December. The main drain will extend along Lemon street from Walnut street to the Santiago creek and catch basins are to be placed at each street intersection. This section of the drainage system will comprise the first unit. The second unit of the new drain will be included laterals from Palm street and East Chapman avenue beginning at Orange street and adjoining the main line on Lemon street.

The third unit will include culverts on Glassell street to do away with the dips at the following street intersections: Walnut, Sycamore, Maple, Palmyra, Culver and La Veta.

An assessment district which will cover the whole city will be formed to cover the cost of the drain and it is planned to base assessments on assessed valuations of individual property.

Bonds to cover the unpaid assessments will run for a period of nine years beginning in July, 1932, and ending in 1941.

In an informal discussion, it was stated that the contractor would be asked to use all local labor possible.

Artugovich was represented by his brother, who stated that the contractor was completing a $200,000 contract in Los Angeles.

NEW OFFICERS INSTALLED BY WOMAN'S CLUB

ORANGE, Sept. 9.—Marked by an informality which was more than gratifying to the new officers and the retiring ones as well who were experiencing the thrilling ordeal of entering or leaving behind a term of office, was the meeting of the Orange Business and Professional Women's club last evening in the Women's clubhouse. Installing the chosen leaders was Mrs. Laura Murray, of Santa Ana.

Employing a fall motif, the decorating committee had decked the foyer with red pompon dahlias and the stage in huge zinnias of the same hue. Tables were in a special formation and were decorated with low green bowls of pastel tinted pompons. Two lovely baskets of gladioluses, asters and roses centered the table where retiring officers were seated, and were later presented to Vernie Hertert, retiring president, and to Florence McCoy as the new leader. Throughout the dinner hour Mrs. Hertert presided, instigating the informality which continued throughout the evening.

In introducing guests and members present, Mrs. Anna Chapline as one of the first of these, and who has recently returned from the American Legion convention at Sacramento, gave a brief talk on her experiences. Continuing in her introductions, Mrs. Hertert expressed appreciation to Mildred Anderson, organizer of the club.

Among the reports which preceded the installation were those of the secretary and treasurer, both given by Alice Cole. Reports of a different nature were given by Miss Adelaide Proctor and Florence McCoy, who recently returned from the Business and Professional Women's convention held at Asilomar.

In presenting the program numbers of the evening, Miss Proctor introduced Miss Melva Fletcher who sang a group of two numbers accompanied at the piano by Miss Bernice Vestel. "To a Hill Top" and "Summer Wind" were the chosen numbers. The last musical selection was given by Mrs. Raymond Warren, pianist, who depicted a young girl at the spinning wheel.

Preceding the installation ceremony, Mrs. Hertert presented the president's pin by Edna Watson. Mrs. Murray then assumed her charge and Florence McCoy was officially put in office. In assuming her duties the new president stressed the value of faith and friendships in the club. Anna B. Muench, as first vice president was installed and was the first of the officers to receive a pastel corsage from Mrs. Murray. Others put in office, all of whom received a floral tribute, were Alice Westerman, second vice president; Leona Blank, recording secretary; Alice Cole, treasurer; Luella Cutwright, auditor, and Vernie Hertert, Gladys Vetterbee, Daisy Stinson, directors. Mrs. Minnie Mayhill, of Santa Ana, and Mrs. Amy Palmeter, of this city were also presented corsages.

In appreciation of Mrs. Murray's capability and courtesy in installing officers, Mrs. Hertert presented her with two gifts, one in behalf of the club, and the other in her own behalf.

It was announced that there will be a board meeting in the home of Mrs. Wetherbee Monday night at 7:30 o'clock.

Miss Ruth Caldwell went to Long Beach Wednesday to enter training as a nurse at Seaside hospital. Miss Frances Deck, Miss Ruth Brubaker and Miss Grace Ellen Lee were recent over night guests of Miss Caldwell.

The first meeting of the season for the Shakespeare club of Villa Park, was held at the home of Mrs. Elma Lee, 623 East Palm avenue, Orange, September 4. The first act of Macbeth was written during the afternoon. Mrs. Ellen Holditch, who has just returned from a trip to Sequoia park, gave an interesting account of her travels and also showed pictures. Those enjoying the afternoon were Mrs. E. H. Adams, Miss Minnie Terrell, Mrs. B. M. Lee, Mrs. J. Morningstar, Miss Margaret Holditch, Mrs. Ellen Holditch, Mrs. H. H. Gardner, Miss R. E. Lee. Jost, of El Modena, which was solemnized Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the home of the bride's parents.

Fall blossoms in all their rich and varied shades were used to form a background for the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. M. R. 44 Candidates Now In Saint Grid Uniforms

ROOSEVELT HI MAY FILL OPEN DATE ON SKED

Coach "Tex" Oliver, field general of the Santa Ana high school football team, has 44 griders toged out in uniform, after three days of practice but expects a hard grind to mold the few veterans and various recruits into another strong Saint team to uphold the high mark set by previous seasons.

Oliver has just 18 days to prepare for his first battle with Orange high school but hopes for a well balanced squad by that time.

San Bernardino, slated for the next game on October 4, notified Coach Oliver yesterday that the game was off. The Saint mentor was trying today to connect with some strong Los Angeles city team to fill the vacancy and has his eye on Roosevelt high school, usually an athletic power.

Several mainstays of the team are still working and have not shown up on the field but they are expected daily. Harold Pangle, burly fullback, is still laboring with a construction gang on the new Newport Beach high school and probably will report next week.

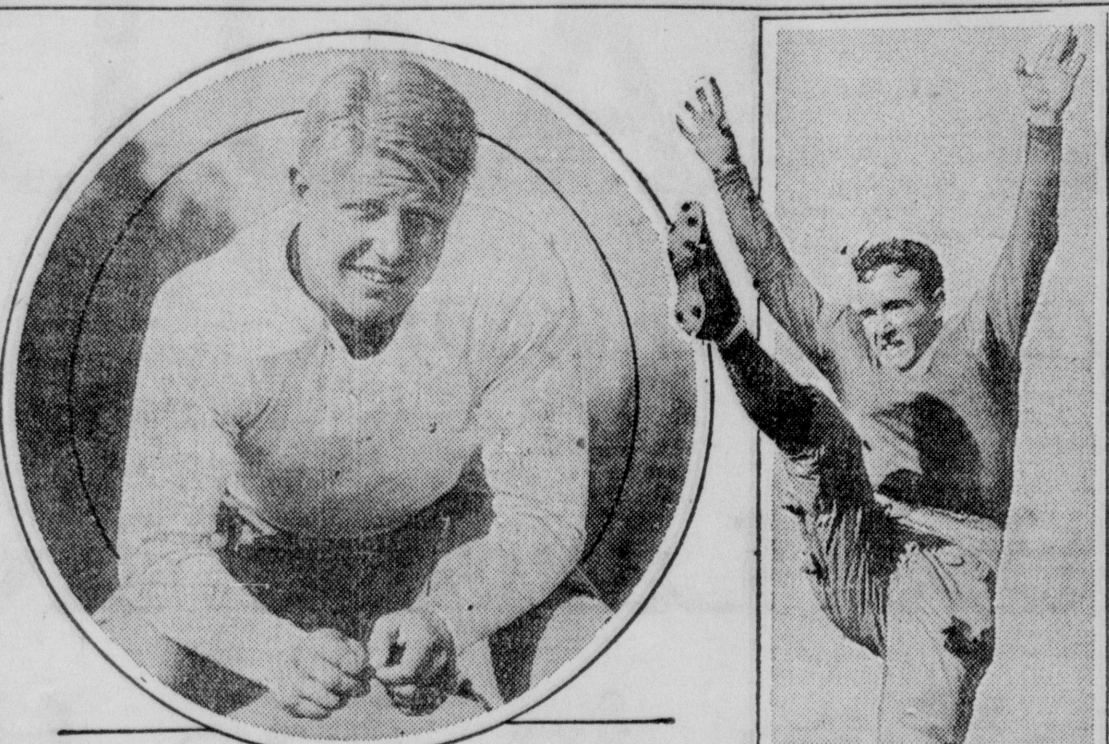

A list of candidates includes Lee Hamilton, Captain Alvin Reboin, Don Crumley, Donald Cornier, Lawrence Lutz, Bill Campbell, Joe Preininger, Ralph Gorden, Miner Whitford, Carl Bowers, Roy Harvey, Dallas Reichstein, Herb Duncan, Bill Douglas, Mike Bingham, Willette Round, Glenn Minster, Frank Burns, Clyde Birdsong, Paul Jacques, Clarence Patmore, Kent Martin, Jimmy Klepper, Don Martin.

Floyd Montgomery, Hideo Higashi, Raymond Nowotney, Eli Hoffmaster, Horace Ender, Max Wilson, Gib Meisinger, Willard Noe, Thomas Carlyle, Garth Olsen.

TROJANS WELL EQUIPPED FOR GRID SEASON

Two quarterback are fighting for the honor of leading Howard Jones' University of Southern California eleven this season. They are Marshall Duffield, and Orv Mohler, right. Duffield has served as understudy to Russ Saunders, triple threat star, for the last two years. Mohler came up this year from the freshmen after a brilliant career in high school football, where he won all-state honors. Trojan followers expect young Mohler to be a sensation.

JAYCEE GRIDMEN HOLD FIRST PRACTICE: PREP SCHOOLS TO REPLENISH RANKS OF CHAMPS

By "SKY" DUNLAP

With one day of the 1930 football season written into history, Coach Bill Cook of Santa Ana junior college today surveyed the 17 men who checked out suits yesterday, wondered who else would turn out for the team and hoped for the enrollment of several high class grid players from outside high schools and from the squad of last year.

Of the 17 candidates who began work, only Captain Al Kluthe, center; Melvin Beatty, halfback, and Gene Olsen, guard, have had junior college experience.

Many of the Don lettermen are holding down jobs, however, and are expected back in the fold within a few days. A practice game is scheduled for September 23 with Chaffey junior college and the players will have to begin work immediately to get in shape for the tussle.

Those who turned out, their position and weight are as follows: Captain Al Kluthe, center, 170; Bert Wilkins, halfback, 140; Melvin Beatty, halfback, 145; Gene Olsen, guard, 170; "Humpy" Golder, end, 160; Bill Darnley, end, 155; Harry Lake, tackle, 180; Emmet Seacord, halfback, 175; Martin Bowman, end, 135; Curt McCoy, center, 150; Kermit ("Brick") McCoy, center, 160; Elmore Lord, halfback, 145; Bert Winslow, end, 145; Vernon Schuappner, tackle, 155; Don Harrison, tackle, 160; Jack McFadden, guard, 150 and Paul Gustlin, guard, 180.

A large number of other players from over the county is expected, but it is hard to tell just what will happen until registration is completed.

From Santa Ana High school, Harry Clayton, all-Coast tackle, Lloyd Nuzum, end and halfback, and Doyle Gilbert, quarterback, are due while Wayne Vance, center, and Stan Hardin, tackle, will prove other valuable additions if they report.

Clarence Hapes, 200-pound tackle from Garden Grove is counted on to help replenish the line. If Tim Wallace, veteran tackle, can make up some deficient credits to become eligible, some of Cook's tackle difficulties also will be solved.

Irv Watkins, 170-pound halfback and star half-miler from Tustin, also may sign up with the Dons. Berry, quarterback from Huntington Beach, is reported to be considering entering here. Kiyoshi Shikokawa and Gilbert Kluthe are two fine Anaheim prospects.

Orville Schuchardt, speedy quarterback who broke his foot in the Phoenix game and was laid up for the rest of the 1929 season, says he will not play football this year because of his basketball and baseball duties.

Wayne Garlock and Hal Dunham, quarterback and end, will report the first of next week, as will several other of the players who now are working. Leonard Noland and Charles Andros, letterman quarterbacks from Garden Grove, were on field yesterday but did not check out suits. Bob McLean, former Don tackle from Coronado, is expected daily.

Emmet Seacord from Tustin and Garlock, returning quarterback, probably will share the kicking honors for the Dons this year. Seacord proved an adept gridder yesterday, passing and kicking to good advantage.

Both the McCoy brothers from Orange performed creditably at center. Curt was a mainstay in the Orange line last year and his brother, Kermit, played two years ago. Elmore Lord, halfback, also played two years ago as did "Toby" Groenow, six-foot, three-inch end who will report this week.

Dale Fuller, head manager last year, has again assumed his duties in that office. He is being assisted as he was last year by Ray Glesener.

Walter Berry is Skeet Club Victor

Hitting 23 out of 25 birds, Walter W. Berry won the Santa Ana Skeet club's shoot Sunday. Herb Carter and Cal Gregg, both with 22, tied for second. Other scores follow: Ed Holmes and Theo. Reuter, 21; Bert McReynolds, 19; Arnold Peck, 18; Herb Heanes, 17; Malcolm Gregg, 16; Joe Teel, 15; Sam Teel, 13; Perry MacAod, 13; R. M. Stinetz, 13; Rene Callens, 12; Dr. Jacobs, 9.

Straight, traps—Rene, Callens, 22; Herb Carter, 21; Arnold Peck, 20; Cal Gregg, 18; Herb Heanes, 15; Dr. Jacobs, 14; Malcolm Gregg, 12.

Yanks Have Great Year--Financially

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—The New York Yankees have completed their most successful financial season in history, exceeding their previous best year of 1927 when their gate receipts went over the $1,500,000 mark.

For the 77 games played at Yankee stadium, they have played to more fans than any other major league club in history.

When 18 of the 31 athletes who won letters for football at the University of Southern California were listed as "lost by graduation" by Coach Howard Jones, perhaps you sat down and had a good cry.

When you saw among the 18 lost athletes the name of Quarterback Russ Saunders, who went through a whole Notre Dame team at Chicago last fall to score a touchdown, you may have been prostrated by grief.

But weep no more. Coach Jones begs to report that he not only has 18 to take the places of those who were lost by the accident of graduation, but he has two pinch quarterbacks who can be depended on in almost any kind of a pinch.

According to Coach Jones' way with a football team, the quarterback is the triple threat star and chief ball carrier. Interest therefore centers in this job and in the race for the honor by Marshall Duffield, holdover, and Orv Mohler, who was a freshman cap last year.

Duffield has been chief understudy to the office for two years. He is a hard line smasher, with a good toe. His arrow-scoring against Notre Dame and Stanford.

When U. S. C. journeyed to Chicago to meet the Irish last fall, Jones took Freshman Mohler along, just to sit on the bench and see how Notre Dame got away with it. The young man was an all-state prep star at Alhambra two years ago, and is a quick thinker.

In the freshman games of 1929 he showed remarkable ability in hitting his man right on the chest with the forward pass. Jones has made no secret of his expectation that Mohler will be a star.

Among the eight regulars wiped out by the calamity of commencement was Francis Tappan, chosen All-American end by many pickers. But summer had hardly begun to wane before ends started popping up all over the place. Another star was lost when Harry Edelson was forced to accept a diploma last June, but Marger ("Mig") Aspit, a driving back, is expected to take the assignment a left half.

Tappan, Saunders, Barragar, Edelson, Anthony, Dye, Galloway, Hog and Stopovich are out of the picture, but as a nucleus for the 1930 backfield Jones has Mohler, Duffield, Aspit, Pinckert, Musick, Hill, Shaver and Moses. The return of Arbelide settles one end position. Wilcox, Jurich and a number of strangers will compete for Tappan's position.

Hall will be improved by his experience at tackle last year. Baker and Williamson, linemen, are still there. A few tackles from last year's frosh, Brown, Plaehn and Armistead, weigh 200 pounds apiece and are said to move very well without crutches.

The schedule lists games with California, Stanford, Washington, Oregon State, Washington State and Notre Dame.

Mr. Jones is said to be diligently preparing his boys for the entertainment. In five years, Mr. Jones has learned to overcome the handicap of graduation very well. So if you have tears to shed, don't prepare to let go just yet.

CUB DISSENSION HINTED AS BIG SERIES BEGINS

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
(I. N. S. News Editor)

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—This is to be "do or don't day" in the National League, the day on which the most theatrical race in baseball history is to approach its conclusion or begin all over again, with everybody involved in a stalemate, which is piping rock for dead heat.

At Ebbets field, the first-place Cubs will begin a three-game series with the third-place Dodgers.

At the Polo Grounds, the second-place Cardinals will be coupled with the fourth-place Giants in a four-game series.

Ten miles apart, as the crow flies provided he is a sincere, earnest crow with his heart in his work, are the battle fronts but a micrometer would space the four contenders at something less than 10 inches and by the time they are finished with each other, the margin may be such that they will decide to split the difference and call it nothing.

What Could Happen
This could happen if the Dodgers won three ways from the Cubs while the Giants and Cardinals were breaking down the middle.

In such a case, the returns on Friday night would have the Cubs showing a half game in front of the Dodgers, with the Cards one game back and the Giants two and one-half games out of the lead.

This almost absurd state of affairs has been brought about by the fact that almost everybody has been too busy watching everybody to have time to watch the Cardinals—and the latter have been worth anybody's scrutiny.

Their record shows 22 out of the last 26, while the Dodgers, in first place when the Cardinals streak started, have been glibly winning 11 out of the last 23, including yesterday's double victory over the Phillies.

As for the Cubs and Giants, they are doing it the hard way. They are trying to see how far they can go without pitching.

Cub Dissension Reported
The Cubs, it seems, are trying to make it even harder than that. According to the stories that preceded them into town, like so many vultures riding ahead of a caravan, the boys are just a happy

STARS HAMMER BOTTS OUT OF BOX IN FIFTH

Batted and pitched into a state of utter helplessness, the Reds of Colton were on the verge of a full confession today that there is only one wonder team in night baseball—Santa Ana.

Their own ace, Venn Botts, unceremoniously knocked out of the box for the first time in two years while Joe Cornelius, the star Star, was flinging the greatest game of his career, Colton's Southern California championship hopes crashed to earth in the midst of a 6 to 0 Santa Ana victory at Colton last night.

Remembering what happened to over confident Long Beach in the American-National Night league playoff last summer, the Stars themselves were not claiming anything.

Stars Almost "In"
The fans and the experts were doing it for them, however. They were saying the Stars were all the same as "in" and that the "Little World Series" will be ushered to an abruptly dramatic termination in the Santa Ana Bowl tomorrow night when the clubs collide in the fifth of their four-out-of-seven game playoff.

Even if the Santa Anans don't bury the Reds tomorrow it is hard to believe the infielders will be able to delay interment proceedings long.

Santa Ana has a 3-1 lead in games. Colton therefore must win three games in rapid succession while the Stars need annex but one. Riverside lost three in a row to Long Beach last year and then won the next four in succession so such a feat is possible, but the Long Beach team of 1929 is not the Santa Ana club of 1930.

Botts Collapses
Botts' complete collapse was the most surprising part of the third and most decisive Santa Ana triumph.

The skinny smoke-ball gunner had not allowed the Stars an earned run in some 21 innings when he went out to the cag, and the Colton home folk were positive he was a clinch bet to square the series.

Subsequent developments naturally proved a severe blow.

Botts managed to get Darwin Scott, the first batsman, on a close play at first, but "Mempy" Hill beat out a bunt, Leavitt Daley tripped, "Rosy" Merrill singled and Wayne Nelson and "Big Bill" Cole blasted successive home runs before the Colton pitcher was able to get anyone else out.

Four Runs in First Round
This murderous attack, the best baseball bunting Herb Salveson's help had shown during the series, produced four runs, Nelson having been ruled out for his asserted failure to touch first base on his home run.

Stars staggered through uncertain second, third and fourth innings without a run, although in plain distress and always in trouble, but was driven to cover in the fifth during another vigorous Santa Ana offensive. Rudy Montgomery shouldered the burden in the middle of the fifth and blanketed the National league titleholders the rest of the trip.

Cornelius was simply invincible for Santa Ana. Throwing with rare intelligence and uncanny control, always ahead of his hitters, the former Imperial valley boy stopped the Coltons cold with two measly hits, one of them a questionable bunt which Santa Ana players claimed the batsman kicked on his way to first base.

Cornelius Invincible
Cornelius had the Reds popping futile flies into the air all evening, the few hard drives off his delivery being swallowed by his usual faultless support. First Baseman Cole handled only four chances, most of the putouts going to infielders or outfielders on lazy popups.

Only two Colton players got on base and neither advanced past second. Haneagan singled past second base with two out in the second. He stole second but expired there when Hunter tossed out Gilbert. Shadock beat out a bunt to open

CLOSED TENTS BARRED UNDER H. B. ORDINANCE

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Sept. 9.—The ordinance preventing beach camping was passed on final reading by the city council in adjourned session Monday night, and on motion of Councilman Conrad, seconded by Councilman King, was adopted.

This is an emergency measure and became effective immediately upon its passage. If there were any campers left on the beach last night, they scampered away before the police arrived on the scene as the beach was clear and free of closed tents Tuesday morning.

Only a parasol is allowed to shelter the beach visitors and if it has side curtains, the curtains are not permitted to extend on more than two sides. No closed tents or enclosures of any description are now permissible on the beach.

Merwin Rosson, city engineer, stated that the plans for east side street lighting were progressing rapidly and that in the immediate future he would present the plans to the council. The new street lighting system is to be constructed by the Southern California Edison company at no cost to the city.

The lighting expense to about $2 a light a month has been provided for in the city budget for the ensuing year. The east side is to be given more than 100 overhead street lights, many of which go on corners not heretofore lighted, as there are only about a dozen lights on the entire east side.

City Attorney Lewis W. Blodgett announced that he had filed the suit against the Huntington Beach company for title to the ocean front or beach extending from Twenty-third street, east to First street.

R. F. Patrick, resident manager of the Huntington Beach company for title to the ocean front or beach extending from Twenty-third street, east to First street. R. F. Patrick, resident manager of the Huntington Beach company, had requested maps and blueprints of the proposed land involved in the suit. Attorney Blodgett was granted permission by the council to comply with the request of the Huntington Beach company. City Clerk C. R. Furr asked and was granted permission by the city council to experiment with a liquid fertilizer on the lawns at the city hall. The plan is to connect the fertilizer with the lawn sprinkling system and when needed the liquid fertilizer is spread over the lawns with no labor expense.

LEGION ARMISTICE PROGRAM OUTLINED

ANAHEIM, Sept. 8.—Plans for the Legion Armistice day celebration here in November were explained to members of the Anaheim Merchants' association last night.

Earl Fulfer, representing the post, stated that the motif for the floats in the parade this year would be the history of the states. The parade, which is scheduled to start at Broadway and Los Angeles streets and end at Five points, will be enlivened by 17 bands besides the life and drum corps organizations, which are scheduled to appear in contest at the city park at 7 o'clock p. m.

Mr. Fulfer stated that the Legion will furnish free coffee and buns at the park for visitors who wish to bring their lunches there. A committee was appointed by President Kurt Epstein to secure suitable entertainment to be given in the Greek theater between the hours of 1 and 2:30 p. m.

Secretary George Reid read answers to questionnaires sent out recently to housewives. Of 1,600 questionnaires sent out, 210 were returned.

Girl, 12, Rescues Young Boy From Water at Newport

NEWPORT-BALBOA, Sept. 9.—Friends of Winifred McCutcheon, 12-year-old summer resident of Balboa, have been praising her prowess as a swimmer for the past few days. Today, some of them let it be known that she saved a four-year-old boy from drowning.

Miss McCutcheon, dressed in beach pajamas, was sitting on the doorstep of her parents' home at Coronado street and the bay front, when she noticed Edward Roth, 4, who had gone out in a small boat with another boy, in the water but apparently unable to keep afloat.

She dashed out, swam out to where the youngster was, and swam back to shore, a distance of about 45 feet, with him.

Charles Plummer, Balboa swimming instructor and former life guard, who happened on the scene shortly after the pair had arrived on shore, said that the boy probably would have drowned had not the girl promptly rescued him.

MASTER CLOCK FOR PLACENTIA SCHOOL

PLACENTIA, Sept. 9.—A new program clock is to be installed at the Placentia Union grammar school, members of the school board voting for this new improvement at the regular meeting yesterday evening.

J. J. Farley, Fullerton electrician, presented a diagram showing plans for the clock system and also for a new fire alarm system with a siren warning instead of bells. It was decided not to install the fire alarm at present, but work will begin on the clock system. This consists of a master clock in the office, which rings bells in the different rooms at the proper time, and is both automatic and manual in control.

Mrs. Mason, head of the school cafeteria, was present, asking for instructions as to where to purchase food and was told to get food wherever it was cheapest. She also requested that a new refrigerator be installed.

A contract was awarded Mr. Brover to keep the nine school planes in tune this year. Superintendent Glenn Riddleberger was asked to make a report on the matter of mileage for teachers at the next meeting.

PLACENTIA NAMES CENTER COMMITTEE

PLACENTIA, Sept. 9.—A committee consisting of E. D. Lang, H. H. Hale, Roy Hale, H. O. Easton, Lawrence Lemke, T. E. Pickering and Frank Rospaw was appointed last night to act as an organization committee for the new Placentia Farm center, and it was planned to hold an organization meeting October 16 at the Chamber of Commerce hall.

Present at the meeting last night, which was held in the chamber of commerce rooms, were R. D. Flaherty, secretary of the farm bureau, and W. M. Corey, acting farm advisor.

Most of the evening was spent in informal discussion of citrus problems.

Prizes Offered By Angling Club

NEWPORT-BALBOA, Sept. 9.—Fishermen can win a number of prizes put up for annual competition by the Balboa Angling club, it was stated today by Cliff Van Kennel, a member of the club.

Van Kennel checked up and found that there are no entries for some of the prizes, and very few for some of the others. Anglers should weigh in their catches at Van Kennel's tackle store, Main street, Balboa, or the other official weighing-in places, and any catch may land one of the numerous trophies to be given away after the season ends.

Yellowtail were particularly numerous off Newport and Balboa during the past several days. Many fishermen look for good catches this month.

CHAPTER 34

Bossy's engine was skipping a beat. But then, it was seldom that all of Bossy's six cylinders functioned simultaneously, and to Peter the recurrent chug of the defective valve was a companionable sound.

When Bossy talked, Peter listened. The rhythmic knocking of the engine as he drove back from San Quentin repeated over and over the logic of a syllogism that defied logic. If a thing was really impossible, it couldn't have happened.

Yet Peter faced two mutually exclusive sets of facts, both of which he was forced to believe. He knew that Andrews' prints were photographs of Mortison. He knew that Mortison had been shot a month ago.

Unless Aline Everett had fabricated an elaborate and motiveless lie about the ring—and in that case, how had he known of it?—the ring in his pocket had been stolen from the Chinese box in Mortison's room.

But Callahan had recognized the photograph as the face of Jerome de la Montanya, who had been dead eleven years. And the ring had lain in his deposit box until he gave it to Fitzgerald.

Callahan must have told the truth. In the first place, his manner carried absolute conviction. He was incapable of any triumph of acting that would deceive Peter's trained observation.

He was also incapable of inventing his story—and he had no motive for inventing it, even if he had the creative imagination.

"Hum-hum-iff-hum-hum-biff!" rattled Bossy. It couldn't be, and it wasn't! It couldn't be, and it was! Briefly Peter considered the idea that Callahan might be self-deceived. Suppose his weird yarn was the product of a brain disordered by drugs. But Peter knew the signs of drug addiction, and Callahan was not "drugged."

Callahan's story must be believed. The evidence of Peter's own senses must be believed. The initials are the same! The face is the same! The ring is the same! The words pounded from Bossy's engine to Peter's mind. But the time, the place, the circumstances, were irreconcilably different. Irreconcilably? Well, they couldn't be, that was flat. Either one of those stories was false, or there was some way of reconciling them.

Peter honked his horn for no other reason than to send the disreputable Bossy a greeting. That was the point! There was no use dwelling on the contradictions in the two stories. Either one was false, or both were true. And if both were true, there must be some way to reconcile them.

A man couldn't be killed twice. But Peter knew that. A man couldn't be killed twice. "Got it!" Peter shouted aloud as he whirled into the Herald parking lot.

The night watchman thrust his head out from his sentry box at the entrance to the yard.

"Oh, it's you, is it?" he said. "Well, you do make a lot of noise. And your valves need grinding and your radiator is boiling."

"That little old car can do everything but talk—and she's pretty nearly talked tonight," Peter answered jubilantly. "Of course her radiator's sputtering—she's been doing some heavy thinking!"

The night watchman held a long-considered and sometimes expressed opinion that Peter was "crazy in the head."

"That bus is going to fall apart some day and land you in the ditch," he growled.

But Peter, with a backward wave of the hand was already disappearing through the rear entrance of the Herald building. His whistle echoed eerily through the deserted local room as he felt for a drop-light.

A man couldn't be killed twice. Well, Mortison was dead now all right, with two bullet holes in him. Therefore he couldn't have been dead the first time. There were no bullet holes then. Callahan had said it was wild and improbable enough, but it was the only explanation. And that would account for the initials. Jerome de la Montanya had somehow recovered and disappeared, to live eleven years longer as Don Mortison. And that eleven-year-old story must be on file among the clippings in the Herald morgue.

"Ho-o-o-o, hu-hu-hu-hoo!" For once, Peter was allowed to whistle his pet tune round and round in an endless circle without interruption. He turned on the light in the library, made his way past the end of the stacks, and faced the rows of filing boxes which covered the wall space from floor to ceiling. His fingers were black with dust when he finally emerged with a handful of clippings headed "De la Montanya."

A dry, tickling smell rose from the paper, already yellowing at the edges. Peter held the thick bundle of clippings almost reverently. With one of his rare moments of conscious insight, he saw the empty local room, with its shrouded typewriters and battered desks, as one of the most romantic places in the world. The ghosts of old stories walked there, the drifting shadows of forgotten turbulence, the ashes of heroic and passionate and tragic hours, settling to dust in the files of the morgue.

Someday, long before Peter's time, had covered the de la Montanya story for the Herald, and had left him this anonymous legacy. Some one had rushed to catch a long-past deadline for some other Jimmy. Only the Herald local room remained through it all, listening to their curses, taking their beat and giving them—well, giving them their gruel and discipline and appointment, but giving them, now and then, a high moment, such a moment as Peter was having now, when he knew that those yellow-margined clippings would give him the clue to another great story.

"Good luck to you, old scout, whoever you were—wherever you are," Peter murmured salute to his unknown collaborator. Then, ashamed of his own sentiment, he sat down at his desk, adjusted the green shaded light, and with a pad of copy paper before him began to sort the clippings. Some he laid aside, face downward. Others he read swiftly, then slowly and carefully, jotting down notes. Suddenly he leaned back in his chair, staring at the lampshade with a non-plused frown.

"Well, I'll-be-damned," he announced to an unlistening universe. There was no doubt about it—de la Montanya had died that night eleven years ago. And the face that looked out at him from the smudgy reproduction of a blurred photograph would have been the face of Mortison eleven years ago. Peter reassorted the clippings and read them again from beginning.

A man of large affairs—old and prominent family—another prostrated with grief. The body was found by the chauffeur, who had been around by some indeterminate amount. Except for the mother and a cousin, Miss Maria de la Montanya, pensioner of the family, the chauffeur had been alone in the house with his master. Peter jotted down his name—Joseph Lynn. It was the chauffeur who had given the alarm.

He was dead all right, for the next day's story announced that Joseph Lynn was being held for the murder. De la Montanya had been killed by a blow on the head from "a blunt instrument." Wouldn't some bright newspaper man sometime find a synonym for that over-worked phrase? In the golf bag in the corner of the room, the police had found a milder with a hair of the dead man, gummed in a smear of blood, on the metal. Lynn's fingerprints were on the handle of the club.

Lynn insisted that he had come downstairs at twenty minutes before two, but the alarm had not been in until two o'clock. He accounted for the delay by saying that he had gone to the back of the house to telephone from the pantry, and had had difficulty in getting the connection. When asked why he did not use the telephone instrument in the room where he found his master, he said that he had not thought of it. He was accustomed to using the pantry telephone; he was dazed and upset, and had followed his established habit without thinking.

"Well, that's natural enough," Peter murmured. "But of course the police wouldn't take a little thing like psychology into consideration."

There followed "Chauffeur's Strange Statement—Saw Ghost of Murdered Man, he Alleges," in heavy type.

He had come down the stairs in his bare feet. He could not tell what sound it was that had awakened him, but he had stumbled out of bed to investigate, still half-dressed with sleep. He could not even swear that he had heard anything.

At the foot of the stairs, he had seen a light shining through the portieres that divided the hall from the library. He heard no further sound, but as he looked across the hall, he saw the reflection of his master's face rise from the level of the table and pass across the mirror above the mantel. He had waited a moment, wondering if it had been his master whom he had heard, and considering the advisability of going back to bed again. However, he decided to go in and ask de la Montanya if he had heard anything.

He had found de la Montanya lying on the floor by the table. The golf club was close beside him. He was puzzled, as he was sure that he had just seen his master's face in the mirror over the mantel piece. And why had he been swinging a golf club at that time of night?

Mr. de la Montanya was very particular about his clubs. Lynn had automatically picked up the club and put it back in the bag. He could not say why he had done this. It was just habit. When he saw the club, he picked it up and put it away. He hadn't thought about it as disarranging evidence—he hadn't thought about it at all.

It occurred to him that his master might have had some sort of fit. He even thought, he himself might be dreaming—it was all so queer. It was a warm night, and the window was open. He stood in the window for a moment, and the night air cleared his head. When he turned back into the room he was fully awake, and when he felt de la Montanya's pulse, he knew that he was dead. He had gone to the pantry, and after some difficulty with the operator, had given the alarm.

This was Lynn's story, from which he could not be made to deviate.

"So help me God," it ended, "I saw the man's soul leave his body. It was his soul that I saw rise in the mirror. His soul passed out through the open window. I saw it!"

"Good work!" Peter paid his tribute to the man who eleven years ago had quoted those words verbatim in the Herald. They had the ring of authentic utterance. They came to Peter across the years, with their vibration of terror.

"New Evidence Against Chauffeur," the next headlines read. The police had received an anonymous note bidding them "look for the missing ring and the money." Mrs. de la Montanya was too ill to be questioned, but her cousin, who had been a member of the household for many years, declared that de la Montanya always wore a signet ring, set with emeralds, the gift of his mother on his sixteenth birthday.

The ring had vanished, but in the chauffeur's trunk was found a leather wallet bearing the initials J. de la M. and containing several hundred dollars. Lynn declared that the wallet was an old one which had been given him by his master, and that the money represented his own savings. The police had been able to find no trace of the sender of the note.

"Hm! I wonder now—was Saw-Tooth Mike trying to double cross Callahan? Or did the murderer crouch outside the window, see the robbery, and fasten upon it as a chance to shift the blame to Callahan's shoulders? But why not leave well enough alone? The evidence already pointed to Lynn," Peter addressed the massed shadows of the local room. "If Lynn himself knew of the robbery, he'd have said so—unless Lynn and Callahan were confederates. But that's out, Callahan really did find that corpse, exactly as he said he did."

The clippings on Lynn's trial were fairly brief. The case of the prosecution rested on the robbery motive. It was not a cleverly constructed crime. Lynn had slipped in upon his master alone and had killed him. He was familiar with the house, and knew that Mrs. and Miss de la Montanya slept in distant rooms and would not be awakened by a slight disturbance. He had opened the window in order to give the impression that it was an outside job, had gone upstairs and hidden the money, and then had given the alarm.

The defense had been unable to break this chain of circumstantial evidence. The best they could do was to plead temporary insanity, based upon Lynn's "ghost story," to which he stuck through all the ridicule heaped upon it in cross-examination. For obviously no other reason than the non-legal mind's distrust of circumstantial evidence, the jury had let him off with life imprisonment.

"And that," Peter mused, refolding the clippings and restoring them to their manila envelope, "is that. Only there are lumps in it. Two lumps. One is that note to the police, which they accepted as manna from heaven and let it go at that. The other is Lynn's story of the ghost. Nobody would tell a story unbelievable on its face unless he believed it. He was probably half asleep and didn't see anything—or at least not what he thought he saw. But whatever it was, he actually did think he saw it."

A single clipping remained, which Peter had laid to one side. It was pasted on a slip of a different color from that of the others, and the date stamped at the top was three years later. It announced the re-birth of the will of Mrs. J. de la Montanya.

Mrs. de la Montanya has been a recluse since the tragic death three years ago of her son, Jerome. Peter read, "A strange provision of the will is the bequest of the de la Montanya mansion in Piedmont, together with a life income, to my faithful friend and cousin, Maria de la Montanya, on condition that she live there continuously and keep the house at all times open for the reception of my beloved son, David de la Montanya, in case he should return."

"Miss de la Montanya, sole surviving member of the de la Montanya family, when interviewed today, said that she would not consent to any more ghosts. He might be worth looking up. I'd sure like to know a little more about friend Jerome's soul. It does seem to have such a way of moving about. When it comes to this, maybe Cousin Maria can be a help."

As Peter climbed down from the staid ladder, he looked at the Herald tower struck ten.

"Maybe I'd better get a bite to eat," he said as he turned out the lights. Not until that moment had it occurred to him that he had skipped lunch and forgotten dinner. "I might as well," he decided. "I can't barge in on Cousin Maria until morning anyway."

test the terms of the will, despite indications that grief over the murder of her son Jerome may have affected the deceased's mind. David de la Montanya, the other son mentioned in the will, has been dead several years. Mrs. de la Montanya has recently been deeply interested in spiritualism, her cousin declared.

Peter leafed rapidly through the later clippings, which he had discarded at the beginning of his search.

"Well, it looks as if Maria still remains in the land of the living," he commented. "I think I'll have to call on her. There's got to be a point where these two yarns meet. If the old lady can throw any light on it, I certainly will give her my blessing."

Peter returned the clippings to their box in the files, and then, balancing on one foot from the top of a small step-ladder, reached sideways to a box marked "Lu-Ly" and shuffled through its contents.

"He'd be eligible for parole after ten years," he muttered. "Let's see what happened to him. Here we are!"

The clipping was brief and Peter sat on the top of the step-ladder while he read it through.

"The Board of Prison Directors yesterday granted the application for parole of Joseph Lynn, convicted of first degree murder. Lynn was sentenced to life imprisonment in 1919 for murder of Jerome de la Montanya, by whom he was employed as chauffeur. Lynn has steadfastly maintained his innocence of the crime of which he was convicted. He has been a model prisoner, and his good behavior and excellent record previous to the Montanya slaying were taken into account by the prison board in granting his parole."

"Now I wonder if he's been seeing any more ghosts. He might be worth looking up. I'd sure like to know a little more about friend Jerome's soul. It does seem to have such a way of moving about. When it comes to this, maybe Cousin Maria can be a help."

As Peter climbed down from the staid ladder, he looked at the Herald tower struck ten.

"Maybe I'd better get a bite to eat," he said as he turned out the lights. Not until that moment had it occurred to him that he had skipped lunch and forgotten dinner. "I might as well," he decided. "I can't barge in on Cousin Maria until morning anyway."

Council Names Committee On Civic Center Project

TO APPEAR AT SCHOOL BOARD MEET TONIGHT

A special committee composed of Councilmen Stanley E. Goode and B. O. Sutton was appointed last night by Mayor Frank L. Purinton to represent the council at tonight's meeting of the Santa Ana board of education when bids for the sale of the old Frances E. Willard Junior High school site on North Main street will be opened.

Prior to the appointment of this committee, the council received a delegation of civic organizations and service clubs, headed by Mac O. Robbins, who asked that the city join in a movement to acquire the Willard site for a civic center. Resolutions adopted at a meeting held last Friday afternoon, and attended by representatives of different civic bodies, urging the acquisition of the Willard property by the city, also were submitted to the council.

Councilman John L. McBride called attention to the fact that the city council already had given the school board permission to sell the property, hence it would be somewhat inconsistent as well as embarrassing to all concerned to have the council change its attitude in this matter. McBride further pointed out that it would be inadvisable to take any definite action inasmuch as the city trustees were not familiar with the financial affairs of the school district and the proceeds of the proposed sale might be needed for some urgent requirements.

The committee will go to the meeting unopposed, and is empowered to make such representations to the school board as may be deemed necessary to further the best interests of the community. All members of the council expressed themselves in sympathy with the movement launched by the civic organization, but they were unwilling to do anything which might interfere with the plans of the school administration.

No action was taken on a resolution submitted by Attorney O. A. Jacobs, commander of the Santa Ana post of the American Legion, urging the city council to purchase additional property for use as parks and playgrounds. While the resolution, adopted by the executive council of the post, was general in character, it was intimated that it had reference to the improvement of the Olive street bowl property. The resolution was ordered filed for future reference.

NORMAN BLANEY TELLS FARM PROBLEMS AND ATTEMPTS AT SOLUTION, IN KREG ADDRESS

Norman M. Blaney, director of the Farm to Market Road department of the American Farm Bureau federation and formerly executive secretary of the Orange County Farm bureau, talked last night over KREG. Blaney's talk in which he outlined national agricultural problems and what is being done to solve them, follows:

"It gives me a great deal of pleasure to talk with some of my old friends in Orange county for a few minutes. The friendships I made here while I was with the Orange County Farm Bureau have been of tremendous value to me and I treasure them very highly. The things you taught me about cooperation and sincerity, your wholehearted desire to be of value and benefit to your fellowman, your magnificent tolerance for the other fellow's viewpoint, the matter of fact manner in which you set aside personal desire and eliminate selfishness so as to labor for the ultimate benefit of the entire community, have been an inspiration to me and from you, I have learned that man must keep his mind on an ideal if he is to arrive at the goal he is aiming for. When I left Orange County last winter I knew I had a big job ahead of me but since then I have come to realize just how tremendously big it really is. I am not the least bit ashamed to say that if I were not able to call upon my knowledge of the manner in which you people have tackled and overcome your own problems, the task would, at times, appear to be impossible. But looking back over the history of Orange County and realizing the problems you have been obliged to overcome to obtain the results you have obtained I realize that by persistent effort, conscientiousness, honest dealing and determined cooperation one is able to not only arrive for the ideal but to ultimately gain his objective.

"I can assure you it has been a very great pleasure to me to be able to tell the people I have talked to how you folks have transformed this county into the very beautiful place it is. Of course, I must admit you have been aided by a climate second to none. But credit is due you for having taken advantage of the good things and making them serve you in building towards your ideal.

"The problems of the farmers and the rural inhabitants of the United States are no greater than those with which you and your forefathers were confronted and which you have so successfully overcome. I am proud to be connected with an organization which is doing so much to overcome the problems of rural America. This country is founded upon, and is built upon, its agriculture. Our national economic success and advancement is in direct proportion to the success and advancement of the people who produce our farm products. The economic depression through which we are now passing is attributed to many different causes but certainly one of the main reasons for it is that agriculture in general is suffering from a diminished income and from paying more than its share of governmental cost in comparison to the benefits it is receiving from the operation of that government.

"There are several basic reasons for the unequal cost and for the ever lessening income. These several reasons are identical with the activities of the Farm Bureau. That organization has been in existence for the past 12 years.

SCHOOL PRINT SHOP WORKING AT TOP SPEED

Said to be one of the best equipped school print shops in California, the Santa Ana high school and junior college print shop is turning out a capacity amount of work under the supervision of Thomas E. Williams, printing instructor.

The addition of a $5,000 linotype machine this summer has made it possible to do much more work than formerly. Willard Francis, head linotype operator, now has a wide variety of types to choose from instead of the restricted type faces with the old equipment. Another new piece of equipment is a proof press to take the place of a home made affair constructed many years ago.

According to Williams, the sale of "Caminos Viejos" (Old Roads), the book on Orange county history written by Terry Stephenson and printed by Williams, is far exceeding his expectations. The first edition of 250 copies was sold out sometime ago and the second edition of 500 copies is going fast. The entire book was printed in the school shop by Williams and his students and is a remarkable piece of work.

The shop also is printing a text on philosophy by Edward M. Nealey, professor of psychology, philosophy and sociology in the junior college. This is rapidly being completed so it can be used for school this term. The fresh handbook, a small book containing all the information of the school for the incoming college freshmen, recently was completed. It was prepared by Ed Adams.

Both the high school and junior college are printing extra large school papers for the first week. The Don, college publication, is all ready on the press and will be distributed Thursday morning. The present staff consists of Oran Aza, editor; Richard Robbins news editor; Paul Wright, sports editor; Edward Conner, business manager and Edgar M. Flowers, faculty adviser. The high school paper will appear next week, with Miss Lillian Hurwitz as editor.

The journalism department of the print shop has been remodeled to some extent and a new arrangement of desks has been made. Several new typewriters, filing racks and newspaper equipment have increased the facilities of the school papers.

Argentina now has regular commercial aviation service over nine routes, as operated by American interests and four by French.

The principle of the range finder has been applied to a new double microscope for measuring the depth of minute objects accurately.

ANNOUNCE WILLARD REGISTRATION DATE

All students entering the Frances Willard Junior high school who did not attend school in Santa Ana last semester will report for registration at the Washington building on North Main street at 10 a. m. next Friday, according to an announcement made today by school authorities.

School sessions will open at 8 a. m., September 15, according to the announcement, which also stated that ninth grade students will put up a five dollar book deposit on that day, to be returned at the end of the year when the books are checked in again.

B. & P. W. CLUB HEARS TALK ON FLYING SAFETY

Exploding the theory that there are so-called "air pockets" which are an unaffairing menace to aviation, pointing out the exceedingly small death rate among those who pilot or ride in heavier-than-air vehicles, and thus emphasizing the safety of air travel as opposed to all other forms of locomotion, Frank W. Hainey, head of the public speaking department of the Western Air Express, yesterday made a wholesale conversion of members of the Business and Professional Women's club, to the gospel of flying according to Mercury.

Meeting in St. Ann's Inn, the clubwomen greeted Mrs. Adelaide Cochran, first vice-president, presiding in the absence of the president, Mrs. Marshall Northcross. Several matters of business were disposed of preliminary to the talk by the aviation expert. These included Mrs. Charles Blackburn's explanation of the miniature golf tournament and the announcement that Miss Mary Smart had taken first place in portraiture in the photography contest at the recent state convention of B. P. W.

Mrs. Thomas Douglas, of the September program committee, presented the speaker.

"In any consideration of flying and its apparent perils, the public should distinguish between the pilots of transportation planes, and those in such different capacities as military, naval, experimental, air mail and private lines," Hainey explained, pointing out the risks taken by the latter group as opposed to those of transportation companies. He explained that in naval and military flying, the pilots had to learn to meet any emergencies which might arise in times of war, hence took risks that a transportation plane pilot would not dream of taking. He drew an analogy between air mail pilots and the famous riders of Pony Express days, declaring that the same rule of delivering the mail despite all obstacles, held today.

"When fears are analyzed, it is easily seen that no one is afraid of the air," he declared, "but of the mechanical contrivance which keeps them in the air." and continued with a clear and concise account of the manner in which the air currents bear up a plane after locomotion is supplied by the engines, and the gliding powers that accompany certain speeds.

LAND OWNERS REQUESTED TO DISCUSS TAX

Santa Ana property owners are receiving invitations this week from W. H. Daum, president of the California Real Estate association, and from the Santa Ana Realty board, inviting them to attend a meeting sponsored by the two organizations which is to be held at Ketter's cafe at 7:30 p. m. next Thursday.

The purpose of the meeting is a discussion of important matters relative to taxation and special assessments and a more equitable distribution of the costs of the same. Glen D. Williams, secretary of the California Real Estate association, will be the principal speaker and is to talk on the subject "Taxation and Special Assessments." It is stated in the invitation from the Santa Ana board that a plan has been worked out by a committee which, if put in operation, will materially lower the real estate tax.

The affair will be in the nature of a smoker and is under the direction of a committee composed of Asa Hoffman, John Knox and Leon Lauderbach. Herb Allemen is president and W. F. Croddy, secretary of the Santa Ana board.

WRONG PLACE
E. B. Gould agreed with Leo Ayalar, 23, and his father, Jesus Ayalar, 43, that they probably needed a bath during the summer months but frowned on their choice of water. He frowned to the extent of sentencing them to 40 days in jail. The two were caught swimming in the Lindsay-Strathmore canal which feeds from the Kings river and is Lindsay's water system source.

ARTHRITIS And Skin Diseases

The diseases, like many others, are due to a retention of poisons. If this retained poison settles in or attacks the joints we call the ailment Arthritis and Articular Rheumatism, and when in the Skin we call it Acne, Eczema, Psoriasis, etc.

THE CAUSE AND THE CURE

If your house maid or office secretary leaves work undone, from day to day, it will not be long until trouble will develop in the home or in the office.

The same is true of the human body. And the ONLY WAY to get rid of DISEASE is to "Put on extra help" and remove all poisons from the INTESTINES, BLOOD STREAM AND SKIN. THE C. & R. HEALTH INSTITUTE uses NATURAL METHODS—Chiropractic, Colonic Flushes and Implantations, Diathermy, Sine Wave, Massage, Diet and BATHS. We cleanse the INTESTINES first, the BLOOD STREAM second, and the SKIN last. From the inside to the outside is the SUCCESSFUL WAY.

Sh-h- A Secret

Overheard—Two boys talking on the street Saturday.

Hello, Dick Gee! I'm glad school is starting again. I've had a fine time this vacation and now I'm ready to buckle down and study.

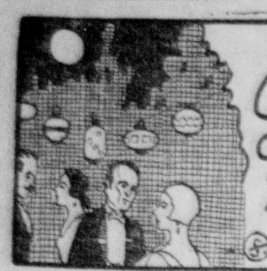

First, I've got to get some clothes. I gave these cords some hard use this summer—they're about "shot." Guess I'll go right down to Vandermast's and pick 'em out.

I always buy my clothes at Vandermast's. They have a big stock to select from, and somehow, their things just seem to always fit and last longer. Their prices are lower, too.

Well, so long—see you Monday at school.

EBELL'S FORMAL OPENING WAS GRATIFYING SUCCESS

Probably every Ebells woman who yesterday afternoon attended the concert with which the new year's series of meetings was formally opened in the clubhouse auditorium, agreed with the opinion that the Valkyries was a fitting name for the woman's trio from Los Angeles, which was chosen as the opening entertainment number. For the name seems to connote power and a strange, wild beauty, and those qualities were undoubtedly characteristic of the songs which delighted the ears of the several hundred clubwomen.

The ensemble work of the singers was powerful and beautiful, and each individual voice registered a strong appeal in the various solo groups. The opening numbers served to introduce the artists, whose appearance was in harmony with the beauty of their voices, for they wore quaint taffeta gowns of the Civil war period, long full skirts sweeping to the floor, fitted bodices falling low on bare shoulders, each with a deep bertha of gold lace like the band of gold lace bordering the skirts.

A variety of expressions and moods seemed to characterize their songs, as in the opening group, with the spirited yet slightly restrained rhythms of "The Show" by Elgar; the sensuous beauty of "Orientals" by Cui-Harris; the intricate phrasing of "Si Mes Vents Avenant des Ailes," by Hahn-Lynes, and the brilliant tempo of "The Sleigh," by Kountz.

First Soloist
Miss Ruth Howell, soprano, was the first soloist, choosing "A Little Song," by Sanderson, "Phyllis," by Vorhies, and the brilliant operatic number from "Manon," by Puccini, for her varied group. Her voice was clear and limpid in quality, and she sang with an expressiveness that gave added value to the group. Recalled by the appreciative audience, she sang an amusing little encore, "The Owl."

Miss Eleanor Bryan, the contralto of the group, won her audience quite as swiftly, and the rich resonance of her voice was fully appreciated. "Caro Mio Ben," by Giordani, was her opening song,

Wedding in Wintersburg Was Pretty Event of Recent Date

A most charming evening wedding was solemnized in the Methodist church at Wintersburg late last week when Miss Muriel Moore and Russel Harbin Hurst of Los Angeles, were united in marriage. The popular bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Ray Moore, prominent Orange county family. Mr. Moore is district manager of the Farmers' Automobile Insurance Co.

The church was beautifully decorated for the rites with rose colored garlands on the chandeliers, while a large arch of pink and white rose buds mingled with fern and many pastel flowers formed an artistic setting for the ceremony.

The pretty brunette bride entered on the arm of her father by whom she was given in marriage. She wore a beautiful pearl white and lace gown in princess style with a Venetian net veil worn in coronet fashion over her jet black curls. She carried a bouquet of white rose buds and sweet peas.

Miss Juliette Blaylock was at the piano for the musical program and with Norman Ruoff, violinist, rendered Lohengrin's Wedding March. Mrs. Mildred Murdy, a bride of only a few months, sang "I Love You Truly" and "Until." Norman Ruoff played as a violin solo, "At Dawning."

The single ring ceremony was used with the small brother of the bride, George Lawrence Moore, in a miniature tuxedo, acting as ring bearer. The Rev. Scott J. Wilmarth of Pasadena, former pastor of the Wintersburg church, performed the ceremony with the Rev. W. A. Matson assisting.

Miss Susan Russell was maid of honor, wearing blue flowered chiffon. The Misses Isabel Russell and Selma Nichols as bridesmaids, also chose lovely flowered chiffons in rose and pink and each carried pink and blue sweet peas.

Little Maxine Murdy was a little rosybud of a girl as she performed her part as flower girl dressed in pink organdy with the fluffy little skirt resembling rose petals.

The bride's parents entertained the half hundred wedding guests in their spacious ranch home after the ceremony. Punch, ice cream and cake were served with the large wedding cake cut by the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Hurst will be at home to their friends at 453 West 115th place, Los Angeles.

Mr. Hurst is an employee of the Electrical Products Company of this city. His bride was a graduate of Huntington Beach high school; attended U. S. C.; College of Pacific in Stockton, and graduated from the Orange County Business college, Santa Ana.

Birthday Party Given In Berrydale Home

Her early September birthday anniversary was made a very happy affair for little Miss Arlene Purlington, when a group of her young friends joined some of her relatives in a happy surprise staged in her home on the Berrydale road.

A weiner bake provided much merriment as well as the meat dish of the enjoyable picnic supper, which was completed by a delicious birthday cake. Games and contests followed in rapid succession, and the height of enjoyment was reached when the youthful honoree was showered with pretty gifts by her guests.

TOO MUCH SUGAR MAKES WAFFLES STICK

Isn't it the most aggravating thing in the world to have waffles stick to the iron in spite of everything? If the iron has been properly tempered the reason for the waffles sticking lies in the use of too much sugar in the batter. A teaspoonful is plenty for ordinary waffles. When waffles are tough you will find too many eggs have been used in the recipe and the intense heat used to bake the waffle has made shoe leather out of all the eggs you thought would make the waffles so much better. The only thing in which your hand may err is the fat, and then not too greatly. And, now, I will give you a recipe I find makes good waffles.

2 eggs, well beaten
1 teaspoon sugar
1 scant teaspoon salt
2 cups sifted flour
3 level teaspoons baking powder
Milk to make a thin smooth batter
6 tablespoons milder shortening
Beat the eggs until as light as for pop-overs. Have flour, salt sugar and baking powder in sifter and a cup of milk at hand. Alternate flour and milk until the desired thin batter has been accomplished. Add the melted shortening and whip for one minute with the egg beater. The melted fat will thicken the batter slightly. It should pour readily from a pitcher, both for convenience and for texture of the baked waffle.

TODAY'S RECIPE Fair Isle Salad (For Six)

6 slices canned pineapple
1 package soft cream cheese
Currant or grape jelly
2 large pears, canned or raw
2 large oranges
Hearts of lettuce
Cream mustard mayonnaise
Some time before the salad is mixed take the lettuce leaves apart and drop the washed leaves into a bowl to drain and chill in the refrigerator. At serving time—and this salad is mixed just before it appears at the table—put the required number of lettuce leaves on each salad plate.

On them place a slice of pineapple and radiating from the hole in the slice, arrange spokes of pear and orange sections, alternating the color. Blend the cheese with a little cream and lemon juice until it is very smooth and soft without being "runny." Put a spoonful in the center of the pineapple, with tip of spoon make a depression in the cheese and fill with jelly.

The mayonnaise must be ready and chilled. Take ordinary mayonnaise and season it with a little dry mustard, add one-fourth as much whipped cream and whip together, then add lemon juice until the desired stage of acidity has been reached. Garnish the salad with mayonnaise and a shake of the paprika can, and serve immediately. Its charm and flavor depend on

RONALD COLMAN IS STAR IN "RAFFLES"

Ronald Colman's performance in "Raffles," famous crook story, which is now playing at the Fox West Coast theater, is probably the best he has ever given the screen.

The hero of "The Dark Angel," "The Winning of Barbara Worth" and "Two Lovers," Colman is seen in a film this time different from all those but something on the order of his more recent achievements, "Bulldog Drummond" and "Condemned."

"Raffles" is the story of a gentleman burglar, who robs safes for the thrill he gets out of it and then after he has completed his last "job," because of a girl with whom he has fallen in love, is forced to stage one more robbery to save a friend's life.

He is caught by Scotland Yard, or almost caught, and the story ends with the girl standing by him although she knows who he is and their flight to safety is made together.

The picture has many thrills, some of the best acting the screen has offered this year and is sure to please most audiences. "Raffles" plays here through Friday night.

'FOLLOW THRU' WELL RECEIVED IN S. A.

"Follow Thru," latest Paramount all-talking musical and comedy success, starring Charles Buddy Rogers and Nancy Carroll, together with Jack Haley and Zelma O'Neal, will be seen and heard at the Fox Broadway theater through Thursday night.

The picture opened here last night to a large crowd and was unusually well received.

A number of excellent song numbers, known throughout the nation are sung in "Follow Thru" and were introduced when the show was a stage hit in New York last year.

Some of the new numbers are: "Button Up Your Overcoat," "A Peach of a Pair," "It Must Be You," "Then I'll Have Time For You" and "I Want to Be Bad."

Miss Carroll sings several of the numbers with Rogers. The comedy in the show, furnished by Miss O'Neal and Jack Haley is above par, while the quartet of leaders in the show give a good performance all through.

German scientists have developed ultra-short rays for radio purposes that vibrate almost as rapidly as the infra-red rays of light.

PICKLES, PRESERVES and JELLIES is the best for this week's free offer. Send only a stamped, self-addressed envelope to get this important number to add to the leaflet cook book we are making this year. These will all be the choicest of recipes.

A good plain loaf cake has been requested by a reader. I am using a fine recipe for one tomorrow. ANN MEREDITH.

The cast is made up of the five girls and five boys who were the leaders in the Fox Theaters-Santa Ana Register Popularity contest which closed here several weeks ago.

CHANEY FILM ENDS RUN HERE TODAY

Lon Chaney, who inaugurated his talking picture debut by using five voices in "The Unholy Three," which is closing tonight at Walker's State, had a unique way of practicing them. "I didn't want to be a nuisance at home," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star confessed, "nor did I want to do it around the studio. So I practiced 'em in my auto, driving to and from work. Once a traffic cop looked at me as though he thought I was a nut." THE TINYMITES

WAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KNICK
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

"How many flowers, lad, do you sell?" asked Scouty. And the boy said, "Well, if I am really busy I can fill my basket high and empty it before it's night. You see, flowers are a pretty sight and they are gladly purchased by the average passer-by."

Then Carpy said, "What do you do with profits when the day is through?" "I save my money," said the boy. "I bank it every day. I have to go to school, you see, and buying books is up to me. The flowers that I sell folks nicely help me pay my way."

"Well, well! That's fine! I'm proud of you," exclaimed the Travel Man. "You do what every little lad should do. Put money in the bank. Now here's an extra coin, my lad. To give it to you I am glad." The flower boy took the coin and smiled. And then he said, "Oh, thanks!"

The bunch then bid the boy goodbye and headed toward a hill nearby. "We're going to climb up to the top," explained the Travel Man. "The famous hill's called Aventine and it is quite a pretty scene. It is the highest hill in Rome, away up in the sky."

They reached the top and looked around. Said Scouty, "What a spot we've found. It's cool and shady 'neath the trees. I'd like to live up here."

With knowing look upon his face, wee Clowny said, "This is the place where Paul and Peter taught the Christian faith in olden year." And then, down through the trees they saw a sight that filled each one with awe. Said Carpy, "There's where we will go when we start to roam." "All right," replied the Travel Man. "When we are through up here we can. The thing that you are looking at is old St. Peter's Dome."

EVENING SALUTATION

When faith is lost, when honor dies, the man is dead.

—WHITTIER.

DRESS REFORM

Dress reform has always been associated with female attire. Years ago Mrs. Bloomer, after whom the familiar "bloomers" were named, started in to simplify women's dress. Later, Dr. Mary Walker received a legal dispensation to dress like a man, and thus became the butt of general ridicule and a subject of general comment. Those were the days when a woman's wardrobe included long trailing skirts, puffed sleeves, petticoats, high-necked waists, and hats as big as a copious flower basket. To these should be added gloves that reached to the upper arm, and boots that went almost to the knee, and the never-to-be-forgotten bustle and hoopskirts and plaid shawls.

Compare this varied list and this copious mass with woman's dress today. Some one has stated that a modern woman's wardrobe can all be compressed into one of her shoes. And one mathematician has figured the weight of a woman's ordinary wardrobe as 26 ounces, as compared with a man's ordinary street dress of 136 ounces. In bathing she is clad within a fraction of "au naturelle," and in summer vacations there is the slight undergarment and the all-covering pajamas. She has gotten far beyond the bloomers by the adoption of the all but universal knickers. Surely women have made progress in naturalness and common-sense dress.

But men are still the slaves of the older styles. The poor suffering male sits at a dress function with long trousers, a vest, a cumbersome coat, and topped at the neck with a high stiff collar. His headgear is a stiff box affair which when first introduced frightened horses as they passed. A woman can come to the dinner table arrayed in light clothes, but a man is not permitted to sit in his shirtsleeves. The introduction of "shorts" for men has been the subject of as much unfavorable comment as when women first appeared in knickers. When will man's emancipation come?

To think of these contrasts no longer makes women the slaves of the Parisian modist. It is man who is the slave of a stylist who started the present mode in the '40's of the last century. Perhaps, some man may be brave enough soon to introduce a new order. But not only will he find himself up against the old custom, but even the women may have something to say as to how he shall appear at the dinner table or at the social function. In the meantime, the man is spending an uncomfortable summer, unless perchance he has betaken himself to the woods far from the maddening crowds, where solicitude is more auspicious to his more natural desires.

That Western Art connoisseur who recently removed the paint from a $400 canvas and uncovered an "Old Master" valued at $150,000 had good cause to say, "Things are not half as bad as they're painted these days."

GLORIOUS CALIFORNIA

What a marvelous birthday party Californians are celebrating today!

From mountain, table-land, desert and valley, ranging from the pine-clad, snow-crowned High Sierras on the north, to the sun-swept reaches of the desert on the south, rise the happy rejoicing of the people that their state is today observing its eightieth birthday anniversary.

And what opulence of gifts are ours with which to celebrate the event! Paintings of rugged grandeur to rival anything that the European Alps can produce; seascapes of wild waves dashing against rocky coasts, or of sunlit waters lapping on tranquil golden sands; peaceful farm scenes, where prosperity seems to smile and beckon; landscapes of golden-fruited groves, or walnut trees fairly bursting with their gifts of luscious nuts. Pictures in the ultra-modern manner, depicting the range of industries, and beautiful with the sharp lines of the modernists. Canvases showing healthy, happy youths swinging enthusiastically on their way to schools, colleges and universities.

No state in the Union can boast a more varied picture gallery than this offered California on her anniversary.

Nor are pictures all her birthday gifts. There are stores of gold, some of it mined from her rich hills and valleys, some from her groves and fields, and still other wealth supplied by her varied agricultural, manufacturing and commercial interests.

Stately ships plying all the Seven Seas, increase this golden largesse. Swift freight cars hurling themselves across the mountain barriers, help to swell the flood, and great motor trucks, like weird gigantic beetles of an H. G. Wells imaginary world, help to keep the flood of golden gifts an unending one.

But better perhaps, than all these birthday gifts for our Golden State, is the happiness of her children. Peace and well-being is theirs, contentment in the climate, and pleasure in the matchless fruits, the excellent highways, the majestic scenery, and the sense of well-being here where no extremes of temperature cause them to dread winter's coming or mid-summer's approach.

A STABLE GOVERNMENT

The experience through which America has passed and is passing with Russia would cause a cynic to smile. Russia is recognized as having as secure a government, whatever we may think of its form or its policies, as any government in Europe is today.

Its leadership has been endeavoring to work out an experiment and is working it out, and has taught itself and the world practical lessons already. It has proved to its own satisfaction that some things that it thought it could do and were wise to do, are impossible to do with human nature.

Be that as it may, however, as a government it has been operating with increasing stability apparently each year. Other countries have recognized Russia, including such nations as France, Germany and Great Britain, while our own secretaries of state Bainbridge Colby, under Wilson, and Charles Evans Hughes, under Coolidge, have denounced the Russian government and refused to take steps leading to an exchange of ambassadors. In the meantime, other nations have been profiting commercially at the position which the United States has assumed, for Russia has been a great purchaser in the world markets. This handicap under which our merchants are operating is affecting the big financial and commercial organizations in the country.

We noticed the other day that Stanwood Menken, president of the National Security League, the great foe of Communism, who has advocated deportation laws to oust Communists, now declares that the recognition of Russia would be the moral and sensible thing to do. He says that although he did not visit Russia, his conversations with informed persons in European cities all indicate that the Soviet government is a stable one, led by able men, and should be recognized. "We have been hiding our heads in the sand; the Russians are a great people doing a great constructive work," he declares. Trade, commercialism, and the dollar are speaking. We wonder how soon the Secretary of State will hear.

A decree has been issued in Mexico against "pistol toting." This action is pretty sure to make inaugurations there in the future rather spiritless affairs.

MINISTERS' SALARIES

Perhaps the following figures may indicate why the ministry is not quite so attractive to young men as formerly. According to the latest statistics of the Congregational churches of the United States, there are 2273 ministers in that communion who receive a salary of less than $2000; 2575 receive between $2000-$3000; 366 receive between $3000-$4000. There are 151 who receive from $4000-$5000, 105 from $5000-$7500, and 31 more than $7500. This means that more than one-third of the ministers of this one of our most prosperous denominations are receiving not much more than the minimum wage to support a family and five children. The high standard of the Congregational ministry calls for a college education and a seminary education, requiring seven years of study. At the earliest such a minister's earning power begins at from 25 to 27 years of age. As he approaches 50 he ceases to be eligible for the larger churches, so that his greatest earning power covers but little more than a score of years. At present the tendency is toward a reduction of salaries.

Perhaps this has its compensations. The social status of the minister and his family is high. The ministry does offer a sphere for a man of talents who loves a high cause to which he can dedicate his life. It does make an appeal to the spirit of adventure. It perhaps makes him much more sympathetic with the needs and the strivings of the poor, which accounts for so many of them being sympathetic with the cause of social justice. The weak and the mercenary among them may have a disposition to sycophantism and suppliance to the richer elements of their congregation. But a close observer will find that men of that type are largely in the minority. There is one thing to be said, and that is that the modern minister is not out for the leaves and the fishes, for the chances are much more than even that he will not get them in that profession.

China's Newest Problem

Oakland Tribune

Over in China Mr. Wu Chao-kung is all hot and bothered because his countrymen are becoming "clothes conscious." Judging from Mr. Wu the Oriental mind is not so different from its contemporary on the top-side of the world as we have been led to think, for he proposes "prohibitive measures" to restrain the men of China from adopting "foreign style" garments. So far, the proposed reform measures have not reached the stage of a complete "noble experiment" with raids on bootlegger tailors and padlocks on sartorial speak easies. Mr. Wu favors something more in the nature of the old "high license" and suggests that anyone with an irrepressible urge for a derby hat and a stiff collar should be taxed from $50 to $100 a year. What really bothers Mr. Wu the most is the awful prospect that "before long we may even see ricksha coolies and farmers in the backwoods sections wearing foreign collars and neckties."

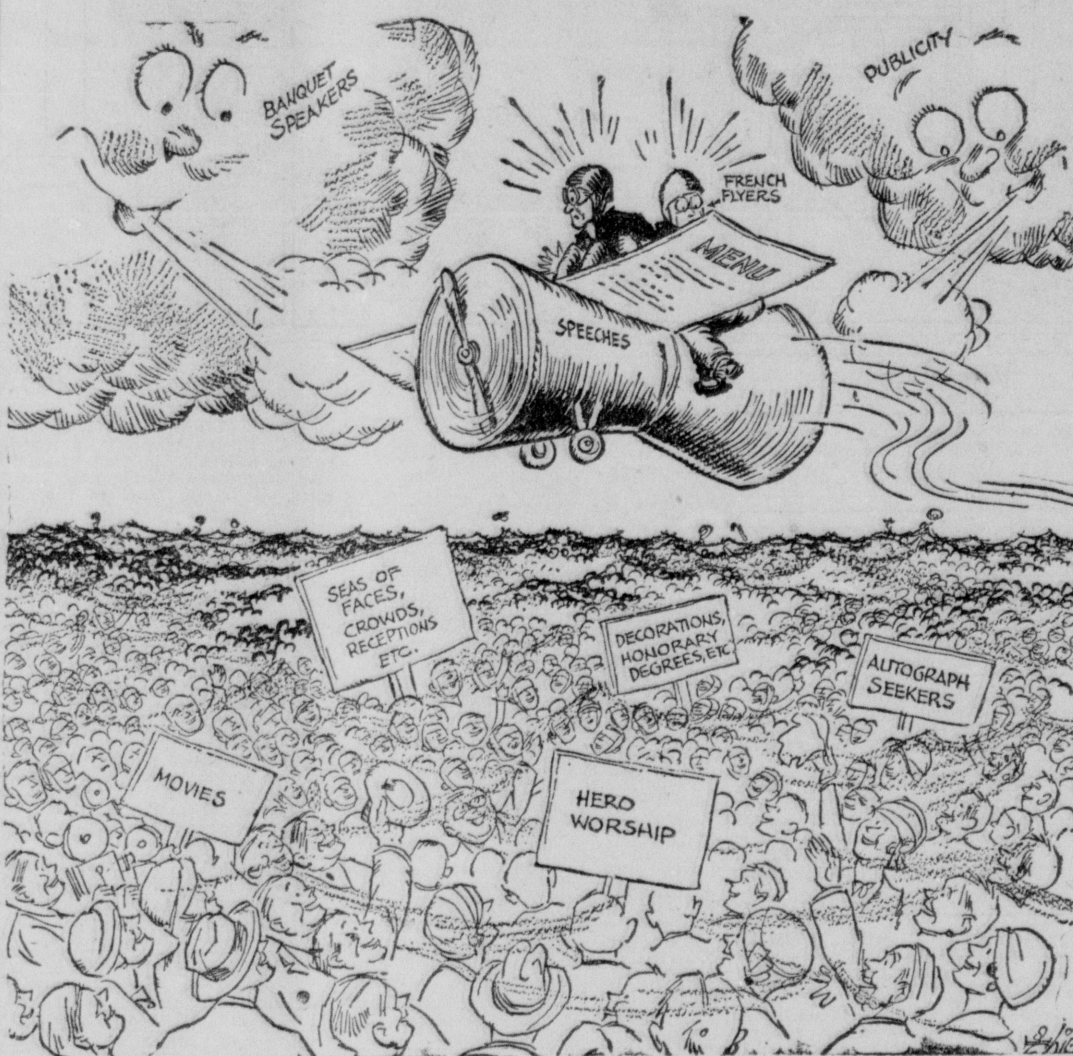

Why any soul lucky enough to be born in a land where he need never chase a collar button under the bureau or struggle with a recalcitrant tie should see, but the psychology of clothes is singularly irrational and the reformer Mr. Wu has evidently not observed its workings.

Unless the Chinese are very different from the rest of the human race, those who could pay the tax would take pride in their "exclusive" foreign models and those who couldn't would soon imitate those who could with cheaper copies, until, even as Mr. Wu forces, the coolie would proudly flaunt his installment-plan collar.

However, the immemorial reputation of China for philosophical utterance is upheld by another Chinese official, who opposes the Wu plan with words of Confucian wisdom, on which we in America might profitably ponder.

"Some people like to be freakish," he says. "It is better to leave them alone."

More Truth Than Poetry

WHY WORRY?

These far-seeing scientist fellows
Are a source of disquiet to me,
For they often allude to the shortage of food
That may come in 2000 A. D.
It seems to me thoughtless and sinful
Upon meat and potatoes to feed
Which, as now it appears, in a very few years
My grandchildren's children may need.

Whenever I toy with a beef-steak
I think, with a sorrowing sigh:
"If I wolf this today, bitter famine may prey
On some well meaning soul by and by."
While the crumbs that were swept from my table
Might be fed, like the manna of old,
To some hungry wight with a large appetite
Long after I lie in the mold.

And, anyway, people of science
With marvelous minds are endured,
And already they've learned that the air can be turned Into tempting and nourishing food.
And so, when to meals I am summoned,
I munch and digest at my ease,
And I dreamily say, "Bully melon today,"
And add, with a grin: "Pass the cheese!"

How Can Our Foreign Debtors
Pay Us?By WILLIAM TRUFANT FOSTER
and WADDILL CATCHINGS

For several generations, the United States was a debtor nation. Now it is a creditor nation. Formerly it had the problem of finding ways to PAY debts. Now it has the problem of finding ways to RECEIVE payments.

The rest of the world owes the United States at least 16 billion dollars. This is the net indebtedness, after subtracting what we owe to foreigners on account of their investments in this country.

Not all these debts are war debts. The debts owed to individual citizens of the United States, which were above eight billion dollars at the end of 1923, increased for several years at the rate of more than a billion dollars a year.

How can these debts be paid? Evidently, the problem is not solved by the mere passage of time. Recovery from the economic upheaval caused by the war is not automatic. The Do-Nothing statesmen get us nowhere. In this situation, the old laissez-faire economics is completely discredited.

Far from settling itself, the problem is getting worse. It is 19 per cent worse than it was when the Young Plan went into effect; for the fall in the commodity price level has made all debts in terms of commodities, 19 per cent higher than they were.

Thus all debtors—including debtor nations—have suffered, as they always suffer from price deflation.

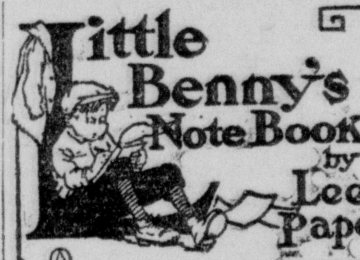

One result is that the 240 millions of dollars a year which the Allies, in 1929, undertook to pay the United States, have become in a single year 26 millions harder to pay. In other words, payment at the present price level requires that much more of goods.

How can our foreign debtors pay these debts? That is a world problem of the first magnitude. Upon its solution may hang the success of the World Peace Pact.

That is the problem we plan to discuss for the next ten days, each day from a different angle.

WELLS ON POLITICS

H. G. Wells has always displayed an abnormal sensitiveness to social trends.

His mind responds like a seismograph.

He is like the Japanese peasant which catches, apparently before any other living thing, the first faint tremors of the impending earthquake.

He is barometric. His mind senses, in advance of their coming, changes in the climate of thought and action.

And in nothing, I think has his mind proved more sensitive than in his forecasts of the relative positions that politics and business must take in the future development of civilization.

Yesterday I confessed that I belong to that minority of liberals who are becoming increasingly skeptical of the capacity of the old new social order of this technical age.

Today I bring Mr. Wells as witness to support the contentions I recorded yesterday.

"Political activities on the part of those who are renovating civilization may then be necessary," says Wells, as he forecasts the future of the machine age, "but even so they will remain secondary activities. It may become imperative that men of the new type should throw their resources into the scale in the supreme interest of free discussion and personal liberty. Some brave government may have to be lifted from the shoulders of the people. Or the gags of some doctrinaire domination may have to be relieved. But though the old type politician may often be an antagonist and sometimes an ally, he can never be an instrument. The further he is kept away from economic and biological administration the better for the world.

"He is the wrong man to look to. Creative-minded people have been wasting themselves for a century by looking to him. It was by turning towards politics and deserting the vigorous initiatives of that inspired industrialist, Robert Owen, that socialism went astray, and it is to the political delusion that we owe now, in nearly every country under the sun, the spectacle of a largely futile Labor-Socialist party which clamors while it is in opposition for the nationalization and socialization of everything, and gives way to a helpless terror of administration as soon as it finds itself in office.

"The only people, practically, who know how to manage transport, the exploitation of natural products, and industrial activities generally are the people who are engaged in doing so now. This is an unpalatable truth for other kinds of men, but it has to be stomach. What we have to do is to develop the common consciousness of such directive people and liberate them from the traditions of the past. We want them to extend themselves to the moral and biological consequences of their activities."

This I think, is one of the main points that will distinguish the new liberalism from the old liberalism. The new liberalism will not knuckle to the unenlightened business man, but it will put its main economic hope in the enlightened industrial leader.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

THE STUBBORN CHILD

What makes a child stubborn? Fear for one thing. If a child has been forced against his will, if he has been beaten, slapped, pushed, and shoved without regard to his feelings, he is likely to put his back to the wall and take his defiant stand. He cannot fight back but he will hold himself to himself and that he will strive to do.

Example is another reason. If the family is sullen or stubborn, he follows in their footsteps. He will take refuge in sulks, in silence and stubbornness. To cure that, one sets an example of cheerful co-operation, and says nothing to the child.

In dealing with a stubborn child the less said the better. The circumstances have set the stage for a stubborn fit. The only thing that will change the mood is the change of circumstance. If you ordered him in loud tones to go and he didn't go, all you can do is to say in your stillest voice, "Very well, you needn't go," and go on as though you had forgotten him.

In your going along however, change the atmosphere. It has been strained to the breaking point. You will find your body is tense and your thought hard and grudging. Let go. Fill your mind with a thought of love, of courage, of kindness. Repeat some fine verse, some good thought that you have memorized, and as soon as you can, sing. If that is beyond you, turn on the radio, or the phonograph, and let the music lift the tension.

When you have relaxed you will find that the child has done so, usually. Say nothing about the stubbornness. It is best never to tell a child that he is stubborn. Just say pleasantly, "Very well, you needn't."

This will not succeed, however, if the child is held under bondage of fear. Search his environment for any cause of fear and remove it. Fear kills all power. It promotes none. It is a mistake to make use of it save in very rare circumstances, such as danger to life and limb.

Investigate the general health of the stubborn child. Sometimes he is deaf, has trouble with his breathing, his digestion is out of order, his glands do not function properly. Do all that is possible to help the child to health and the stubbornness will vanish.

Stubbornness is a danger signal. Something has gone wrong. You will have to search for that something—first in the family circle, then in the child himself. Remove the cause.

Avoid the occasion of stubbornness. A trait that is allowed to slumber in disuse will weaken itself and die. That is a very important thing to remember when struggling with a child's faults, whatever they may be.

BOSTON POLICE STRIKE

On September 9, 1919, following the suspension of 19 officers for activities connected with their affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, 1500 Boston policemen went on strike to enforce the recognition of their newly formed union. It was the first police strike in the United States. Rioting and disturbance immediately resulted and a provost guard was brought from the navy yard to quell the disturbers. Stores throughout the city were broken into and robbed. The following day the city was placed under martial law and cavalry and 5000 members of the state guard patrolled the streets.

Governor Coolidge telegraphed the secretary of war and the secretary of navy asking for federal military assistance in case the state guard was insufficient. Shortly after this Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, requested that the policemen return to their posts until after the industrial conference.

Coolidge refused to give the
